PENSION LAW CITED IN CITIZENSHIP GAIN

25 Per Cent Rise Reported in Number Filing First Papers.

Allens in Georgia yesterday were reported "snapping out of it" in the matter of seeking United States citizenship, and the reason was laid by federal officials to the new old-age pension law and proposals in Georgia for a state program along similar lines.

During the first quarter of this year federal officials said they noticed an increase of approximately 25 per cent in the number of aliens filing their first citizenship papers.

The number that filed applications last year was double the normal figure, authorities said. They fixed the normal figure at about 100 a year for Atlanta.

Cain Discovers Royal Romance Destroys Peace of Journey Home

Even His Amendment of Nationality Leaves Britons Chilly Because of Windsor's Abdication for His American Wally.

By ARTHUR CAIN.

Arthur Cain.

Since I have been back in the land of the free and the home of the brave I have dashed to and fro in the effort to discover just exactly what was the opinion of the homefolks on certain questions which have arisen since Cain left the family hearth two years ago. So many things, such as the Spanish War, the kidnapping of Ching Kai-shek and King Edward's abdication occupied the interest of the world while I was away that it is difficult to get a perspective of everything without comparing the varied viewpoints of the world's people.

Not wishing to appear one of those you-know-what people who strive for originality by way of shocking everyone available and not wishing to stick the Cain neck out too far when it comes to expressing opinions, I did try to find what people thought of Roosevelt, the present Duke of Windsor, Stalin, Hitler and so on before I made any comments. But so far opinions are so conflicting that I don't know any more than when I began. Consequently, there's nothing to do but speak up like a little man, tell you what the other part of the world thought of the situation and prepare to battle the enemy right and left if Cain is called sophomoric, a wise guy or a downright liar.

Evans March.

It was while I was in China that the ex-Prince of Wales decided he preferred his lady love to his loyal subjects and removed himself from the throne. That puts it conservatively, without delving into politics of our English cousins.

The news, being as it was in Shanghai, was so noncommittal that at first we hadn't the slightest idea what was going on, which probably put us on a par with most of the British officials.
Typical British remarks referring to "the scandal," rather than "the romance" as in American papers, weren't enlightening on the subject at all. Suffice it to say that my English roommates became so difficult to live with that I finally moved out altogether and took up quarters aboard the most pest-ridden vessel in the port of Shanghai.

Stares Chill Comment.

The slightest remark by the innocent Cain on the topic of the abdication drew such coldly re-proving stares from these sons of Britain that we soon shut up and said nothing at all. Even among themselves these good Limeys refused conversation on the matter.
Cain became righteously prejudiced against the man who caused such a personal and intense pain among his best friends in the orient.

From then on, during the entire deucedly ashamed of the man who had been built up to be the most popular mortal on earth.

Still in Dark.

As I said before, this is my reaction of this particular situation when viewed from the other side of the Pacific and I still have not the slightest idea what you think of it. Maybe you think it's grand. I don't. To be quite frank, Cain's chief interest in the whole affair was the fact that our trip from China was not nearly so pleasant as it should have been... if the ex-Prince of Wales had preferred his loyal subjects to his lady love.

FEDERAL BUREAU RAKED FOR STAND ON FAIR TRADING

Commission Violates Ethics in Enunciation Against Act, Druggists Are Told Here.

Robert L. Swain, of Baltimore, deputy food and drug commissioner of Maryland, criticized the federal trade commission yesterday for its opposition to a proposed national fair trade law. He was guest speaker at the afternoon session of the Georgia Pharmaceutical Association's convention now under way at the Biltmore hotel.

He declared "the statement of the federal trade commission, upon which President Roosevelt acted in sidetracking the Tydings-Miller national fair trade enabling act, violates every conception of ethical treatment."

Price Rise Intimated.
Swain said later in an interview that the trade commission's report indicated that the act would "probably boost prices." He said he was not quoting their report. He charged, on the other hand, that the act would "permit manufacturers to name a minimum price for trade-marked competitive items."

In his address Swain said the act was aimed at elimination of "low leader selling" and charged that the report of the commission was "a mixture of suppressed truth, half truth, and unjustifiable innuendo."

Dr. George L. Secord, of Chicago, president of the National Association of Retail Druggists, addressed the convention on the same subject, saying that the little retailer is protected "at least partially" by present fair trade acts.

Tennessee Faster Plans Trip to Town

DUNLAP, Tenn., May 12.—(P)—Friends of Jackson Whitlow, who recently ended what he said was 82-day fast "at the call of the Lord," said today he plans to come to Dunlap Saturday. They said he had eaten bread and well-cooked meat yesterday for the first time since breaking the fast.

In the various states, but that a national law is needed for complete correction of the "evil" of the price-cutter.

Prosperity Foreseen.

George D. Duncan, past president of the Kentucky Pharmaceutical Association, foresaw in an address to the delegates an era of "safe and sure prosperity" for druggists of the south, due to "disintegration of industrial centers with an inclination to scattered units in smaller communities."

The women's auxiliary of the association held its annual luncheon meeting and business session at the Druid Hills Country Club yesterday at the same time the delegates themselves were guests at a buffet luncheon with the Georgia Ice Cream Manufacturers as hosts.

Social activities of the convention last night included a dinner at the Ansley hotel, followed by the annual Traveling Men's Association dance at the Brookhaven Country Club.

The three-day convention is to come to a close today, with the T. M. A. electing officers for the coming year. Nominations for officers of the G. P. A. will be received for later mail balloting.

PRIESTS OBSERVE SILVER JUBILEES

Rev. Frs. McGrath and Reilly Honored at Ceremonies and Fiesta.

Two priests at Sacred Heart church entered their second quarter-century of service in the priesthood yesterday with special services and entertainments through the day marking the anniversary.

The Very Rev. J. T. Reilly, pastor, and the Rev. Edward T. McGrath, assistant pastor, both of the Society of Mary, were the honorees at the ceremonies, highlight of which was solemn pontifical mass with the Right Rev. Gerald P. O'Hara, bishop of the Savannah-Atlanta diocese, presiding.

The Knights of St. Gregory and the fourth degree Knights of Columbus attended the services in full regalia, and afterward the silver jubilants were entertained at breakfast in the rectory.

Last night, the celebration continued with the annual May Day pageant of the Sacred Heart parochial school, held on Marist College campus.

Both the 25th anniversary priests are native Georgians, Rev. Fr. Reilly coming from Savannah and Rev. Fr. McGrath from Tate.

TEXTILE NRA BILL TERMED UNSOUND BY GEORGIA SOLON

Ramspeck Expresses Belief
Singling Out of Industry Is Wrong.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—(AP)—Differences of opinions developed in a house labor subcommittee today as to whether the textile industry should be singled out for special federal regulation or blanket under some future general wage and hour legislation.

The subcommittee is studying a bill by Representative Ellenbogen, Pennsylvania, Democrat, to create a "little NRA" for textiles.

Representative Ramspeck, Georgia, Democrat, told newsmen he thought it economically unsound to single out such an industry for special regulation.

Two other committee members, Representatives Smith, Maine, Republican, and Gildea, Pennsylvania, Democrat, said they favored general wage and hour legislation but indicated they would support a special textile bill. Smith said he felt some immediate legisla-

Jail Term Hanging Over Drunk Driver

Straight jail sentence for drunken drivers will be proposed by Alderman I. Gloer Hailey at a meeting of the ordinance committee this afternoon.

Hailey, chairman of the committee, said he would sponsor an ordinance to force drunken drivers to "spend at least five days in jail" as a means of reducing traffic deaths.

Alderman Frank Reynolds announced yesterday he will sponsor an ordinance to prohibit angle parking anywhere in the city. It will be presented in council Monday, he said.

Bar on blowing horns for curb service after midnight and an ordinance to prohibit solicitation of votes are two proposals which will have public hearings by the committee today.

tion was necessary to aid textile workers "in this emergency."

The committee recessed late in the day until next Tuesday when representatives of the industry will begin presenting their case.

The Cotton Textile Institute already has expressed opposition to special regulatory legislation for the industry and specifically criticized the Ellenbogen bill as delegating unwarranted powers to a proposed national textile commission.

The committee heard Francis J. Gorman, president of the United Textile Workers, assert that federal regulatory legislation for the industry would be unnecessary if the union were strong enough to enforce its demands.

"Unfortunately," Gorman said, "operators in the south are unwilling to recognize labor organization as a constructive force."

tomobile and her fundamental knowledge of Atlanta traffic regulations. To enter, the contestant has only to sign one of the test cards at any Ford station in the metropolitan district and Roswell or at Sears service station. The tests will be given in automobiles furnished by the Ford dealers of the city.

Both Mayor Hartfield and Chief of Police Hornsby endorsed the drivers' contest when it was explained to them yesterday.

Hartfield Lauds Contest.

"I think the Constitution is to be highly commended for providing such an excellent means for women to brush up on traffic regulations," Hartfield said. "I wish to urge each woman to take advantage of the expert driving lessons thus made available."

Chief Hornsby was equally enthusiastic. "Whether the contestant wins or loses, this contest provides an excellent opportunity for every woman driver to learn rules for driving safely and to receive expert instruction in the proper manner of operating an automobile. It will be friendly competition at the same time the contestants are going to school. The Constitution is to be commended."

Instructors, furnished by the police departments, will be on duty at each of the test depots in the metropolitan area from 10 o'clock each morning until 4 o'clock each afternoon except Sunday during the 10-day contest period.

At the close of the contest, May 28, the 10 drivers with the highest score will be selected to compete Saturday in semi-finals. Sunday, May 30, the finals will be held at Sears parking lot.

The first three prizes offered by the Atlanta Ford dealers are as follows: $100 first prize; $50 second, and $25 third. Numerous other prizes will be offered by the various firms co-operating in the staging of the contest.

Details for Asking.

Complete details of the contest can be secured at any of the test depots which are as follows: Ernest G. Beaudry, 169 Marietta street, N. W.; A. M. Chandler, Inc., 138 East Ponce de Leon avenue, Decatur; East Point Company, 316 Main street; Frost-Cotton Motors, Inc., 452 Peachtree street, N. E.; John E. Mayor Hartfield is shown above taking one of the tests to be given contestants in The Constitution-sponsored Women's Driving Contest which begins next Wednesday. Chief of Police Hornsby is giving the mayor last-minute instructions before he "shows his skill." The mayor's official car was used for the test. Chief Hornsby said the mayor passed the test "satisfactorily." Both then endorsed the contest as being educational.

For the assistance of the contestants, a digest of Atlanta traffic regulations, compiled by the Atlanta Motor Club safety department, will be available at all the test bureaus and at The Constitution office.

Atlanta firms co-operating in the contest are all Ford dealers in the metropolitan area and Roswell; Sears Service Station; Harris Automotive Service; Black and White Cab Company; Dargan, Whitington & Conner; Wall's Cleaners.

Details of the contest have been arranged by the following committee: A. G. Henley, County Police; H. W. Reed, Louis Moore, Major Trammell Scott and Captain Jack Malcom.

will speak at the meeting which will be on the roof of the Ansley. His address will be broadcast over station WSB beginning at 9 o'clock.

Officers of the Georgia Old-Age Pension Association, headed by President W. W. Webb, of Hahira, and local offices of the association's branches in more than 120 Georgia counties will be special guests at the meeting Saturday night.

Message to Solons.

Governor Rivers yesterday addressed a message to each individual member of the senate and house of representatives, which submitted the amendments, urging them to attend Saturday night's meeting and to work for the adoption of the amendments. His letter follows:

"I am calling an informal session of the General Assembly to meet in Atlanta Saturday night, May 15, at 8 o'clock in the interest of the passage of the constitutional amendments on June 8.

"While I realize it is a sacrifice in time and money for you to come to this meeting I think the question of these amendments and the program of such vital importance to the people of the state that I trust you will be able to come."

"I will address the meeting on certain features of the amendments and it will be broadcast over Radio Station WSB at 9 o'clock, eastern standard time. Please give all the publicity possible locally to these broadcasts."

"E. D. RIVERS, Governor of Georgia."

explained to the voters they will give them an overwhelming vote.

"We feel certain that already the state is behind the program of the present Democratic administration but we want as large a vote as is possible," the state chairman said.

"Vice Chairman Arford will devote his time to explaining these amendments to the people and I will give the campaign as much of my time as I can afford."

Meanwhile plans for the second of a series of Saturday night meetings in support of the program were proceeding. Governor Rivers

SENATE COMMITTEE PLANS COURT VOTE

Body Virtually Ready for 10-to-8 Adverse Report.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—(UP)—The senate judiciary committee was virtually ready tonight for a 10-to-8 vote reporting unfavorably to the senate on President Roosevelt's supreme court reorganization bill.

After hearing Senator William Gibbs McAdoo, Democrat, California, explain his proposal for a court fixed at 15 members for the next 25 years, the committee adjourned until Monday. Tuesday under agreement, the committee will begin voting on the bill and amendments.

Opposition leaders said tonight that they did not expect Mr. Roosevelt to change his attitude, regardless of the senate situation. The committee, however, has one more day of secret discussion—Monday—in case there is a new development.

Monday also will mark another judgment day in the supreme court, with possible decisions on the social security law likely to have some effect on the eventual outcome of the bill, over which the senate is about evenly divided.

1,500 TUBIZE WORKERS GET 10 PER CENT RAISE

NEW YORK, May 12.—(AP)—The Tubize Chaitillon Corporation, rayon manufacturers today announced a 10 per cent wage increase for all salaried employees earning less than $300 a month and the same amount for all plant wage earners.

The increase, which will affect approximately 1,500 persons in its Rome (Ga.) plant and about 300 in the Hopewell (Va.) plant, becomes effective May 16.

BRAKE SAFETY TESTS MADE ON 3,000 CARS

More than 3,000 automobiles have been tested for good brakes by the Atlanta police department-Junior Chamber of Commerce volunteer committee during the 10-day campaign which ends today, officials estimated yesterday.

About 300 owners of the cars tested failed to win "OK" stickers, they said. Many of these, however, had brakes adjusted and returned for a second successful try.

STOCK DEALS TOLD BY ALLEGED 'FRONT' FOR KOPALD-QUINN

Four of 21 Defendants Are Implicated in Testimony of Firm 'President.'

Four of 21 defendants in the Kopald-Quinn trial, involving charges under the national securities exchange act of mail frauds in connection with handling of stock sales transactions by Kopald-Quinn & Company and four associated firms, were implicated in testimony in United States court yesterday by John J. Burke, alleged "front" for one of the companies.

Burke followed Leo Bernstein, former employee of the syndicate, who explained technicalities of handling stock deals in the Kopald-Quinn and other offices.

Reprimands by Court.
Yesterday's court session was marked, besides sensational disclosures by Burke, by sharp reprimands by Judge E. Marvin Underwood, presiding district judge, of defense attorneys for "going into arguments" when they should only "enter objections." Defense counsel punctuated the government's examination of Burke with frequent objections, some sustained and many overruled by Judge Underwood.

Burke related how he, as a former clothing salesman, became "president" of John J. Burke & Company, wholesale stock dealers, at a salary of $50 a week to start, with a promise of $100 a week later. He said his duties at first consisted only of keeping up daily contacts with the Burke company's offices, usually by telephone, going to the offices only when he was wanted to sign checks and "calls" for stock shares.

Operations Told.
Asked by Assistant United States Attorney M. Neil Andrews who gave him instructions, Burke said all his orders came from Henry Bernstein, one of the defendants. He said also that Joseph Mendelsohn and Joseph Sherman, two other defendants, hired him and fixed his salary, which later was raised to $75 per week by L. I. Sutterman, still another defendant.

Burke identified a signature of H. H. Kopald, of Kopald-Quinn & Company, on one of the "calls" for stock. He testified also that Samuel Genis, also a defendant, "traded in the company" under a power of attorney.

He testified that he once signed a "call" for 550,000 shares of National Service stock, on orders of Henry Bernstein, when the company had only 10,000 shares of that stock in its possession.

Sold at Retail.
Stocks "calls" on Burke & Company came from Kopald-Quinn & Company, McCormick & Company and Gould & Company, Burke testified. These concerns sold at retail, "buying" through Burke & Company, he said, and when they called on Burke & Company for delivery, it was his job to sign the calls signifying delivery.

The case, expected to extend over another month at least, already is in its fourth week. Of 75 witnesses summoned by the government, only 11 have been put on the stand to date, including Burke, who will take the stand again today for completion of direct examination.

Each government witness will be subject to cross-examination by attorneys for the 21 defendants. Seven attorneys represent 20 defendants and the remaining one defends himself.

LITTLE RELIEF SEEN IN WPA LABOR PLAN

County Agent Doubts Many Will Quit Rolls for Farms.

Little relief for Fulton farmers under the WPA proposal to release men for farm labor was anticipated yesterday by S. D. Truitt, county farm agent, despite a growing number of complaints from agriculturalists that laborers could not be found to work the fields.

The county agent based his prediction on experiences in former years when men failed to leave the WPA rolls to return to farm work because wages paid on the farm were not equal to those paid for less work on WPA.

The average wage paid a farm hand was estimated as from $1 to $1.25 per day for six days per week while WPA pays around $2.40 per day, two days per week, the agent said.

Further difficulty in determining the amount of labor needed was described. Farmers often say they need aid and then do not employ the men after they are furnished them, he continued.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

An excess of acids or poisons in your blood, when due to functional kidney disorders, may be the cause of nagging backache, rheumatic pains, lumbago, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

You'll wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

ATLANTA, GA., MAY 13, 1937.

HOW MUCH RELIEF IS NEEDED?

Congress, in the opening days of the present session, let it be known that economy in federal expenditure would be the keynote of its legislative program. There was hope that means would be found to so reduce outgo it would not exceed federal income, thus balancing the budget, admittedly the first essential step toward that stability in the nation's affairs which must be achieved if returning prosperity is to continue.

In this program of economy the keystone item was the appropriation for relief. President Roosevelt, in his budget message, asked for $1,500,000,000, but failed to provide statistics on the number of unemployed. All efforts to authorize a census of unemployed have been opposed and blocked by administrative officials.

Reports from nongovernment sources, while varying widely, tell of a rapid reabsorption of labor by private industry. The Manufacturers' Association, for instance, asserts that employment now equals the peak levels of 1929, prior to the coming of the depression.

In Georgia there is a reported shortage of labor in the agricultural sections of the state, with farmers offering twice the wages such labor commanded four years ago. Miss Gay B. Shepperson, Georgia WPA administrator, reports a decrease of 40 per cent since last spring in the number of men employed on federal relief projects in the 152 agricultural counties of the state. She also states that, wherever there is demand for labor, the WPA is releasing the specific workers needed.

Congressman Stephen Pace, of the third Georgia district, in a letter to the Lions Club of Cordele, expresses doubt as to further need of any federal relief at all.

"I believe that the emergency is over," he writes, "and that we could set our house in order, cut expenses, abolish unnecessary agencies, hold expenditures well within our income, and perfect plans for the orderly reduction of the national debt."

Congressman Pace further states that he has been unable to get the federal authorities to approve projects for several communities in his district for the stated reason that there is no one on the relief rolls in those communities, while at the same time complaints are made in the district of a shortage of labor "caused by people standing around waiting for relief."

It is reported that a house appropriations subcommittee has tentatively decided to lop $500,000,000 off the relief appropriation, making it $1,000,000,000. In face of this report, however, Representative Boland, of Pennsylvania, the Democratic whip, declares "We'll put the $500,000,000 back."

Lacking definite information of the national unemployment situation, the country must, of necessity, accept such reports as that of the Manufacturers' Association, the figures given out by Miss Shepperson for Georgia, the situation as Congressman Pace reveals it in his district, and similar reports from other sections and other states.

In the face of these evidences of the return to normal employment conditions, it will be difficult for those who insist upon the $1,500,000,000 relief appropriation to explain to the nation and to their own constituents why one of the chief items of the anticipated economy has, apparently, been sidetracked in favor of a continuance of unrestricted spending.

That unrestricted spending was justified in inception by an emergency, but is left without logical reason with the passing of the emergency.

THE MISUSE OF DRUGS

Unrestricted sale of drugs which, while valuable when performing their proper functions in the hands of competent physicians, induce insanity when misused, is responsible for a large increase in the proportion of those mentally unstable in the population, according to Dr. Frank J. Curran, of Bellevue hospital, New York.

Dr. Curran states that so-called sleeping powders are responsible for a rapid increase in the psychoses which are becoming one of the most serious of health problems in the United States.

Of these drugs, 60 different varieties are now manufactured of one group alone, the barbiturates. When taken unrestrictedly by a layman these sleep-producing drugs may easily produce insanity. Symptoms include stupor, convulsions, halting speech, trembling tongue and lips, shaking fingers and unsteady gait.

Misuse of an older and better known sleep-producing group, the bromides, will cause the victim to see imaginary flowers, hear voices and believe they feel electric shocks.

Rigid laws to control the distribution of such drugs as these are needed. Only two states, New York and New Jersey, now have laws restricting the sale of these chemical enemies of the mind.

Every state should strike at this growing menace by forbidding sale of the accused drugs, except on the prescription of a reputable physician. Otherwise there is genuine danger of a future day when it will be impossible to provide adequate institutions to house the mentally diseased.

TRAINED POLICEMEN

Yesterday the first class of the new school for Atlanta policemen held its opening session. Forty selected officers went to school in the special room at police headquarters remodeled for that purpose. Competent and able instructors, both local men and experts from other states, have been provided.

When this group of 40 has completed training they will, in turn, be assigned to teach other members of the local force.

Yesterday may well be regarded, in years to come, as the day on which Atlanta's law-enforcement organization "turned the corner" from well-meaning but haphazard amateurism to trained efficiency.

In this day of mechanized and scientific achievement, the criminal has at his command weapons undreamed of a half century ago. To combat that criminal, the modern police officer must be given even finer equipment. That equipment will be furnished at the new police school. Officer-students will learn modern methods of crime detection, how to defend themselves properly against criminals, the expert use of firearms, the science of ballistics, and the methods of identification, traffic safety methods and other subjects.

Atlanta, through this school, may hope to see her police force step from the nineteenth century into the modern ranks of 1937.

WHEREIN LIES HISTORY?

It is altogether possible that future historians of the British Empire will refer to this month of May, 1937, as the month when an imperial conference instituted steps to meet the challenge of dictatorship, particularly in Europe, to the principles of liberty and peace. Overshadowed by the pagantry of the coronation, it is yet quite possible this conference, now in session in London, may prove of such importance that all the pomp and acclamation incident to the crowning of George VI may take but minor place in the estimate of the future.

The prime ministers of the various British dominions, in London for the coronation ceremonies, have taken advantage of the opportunity to confer upon the future organic composition of the empire. It was in 1930 when the last imperial conference completed one phase of development with the decentralization of authority in the empire. Six years ago the British parliament abandoned all control over the dominions of Canada, Australia, New Zealand, the Union of South Africa and the Irish Free State. According to students of governmental progress, that made Great Britain "merely another dominion" on equal footing with the other five.

These six units are now in somewhat the same situation as the 13 original American colonies after the Revolutionary War. Each has complete individual freedom, but all—with the possible exception of the Irish Free State—intend to continue to work together and not to separate their interests.

The American colonies solved their own problem by the adoption of the constitution.

What will be the outcome of the imperial conference now in progress in London cannot be foretold. That it will result in adoption of an empire policy that will play a large part in the eventual outcome of the present conflict between the opposing ideas of democracy and dictatorship, is inevitable. It may well be the deciding factor between peace and Armageddon.

"Another bridge has been blown up in suburban Madrid." There are no exemptions in this war. The fallen arches are in the thick of the fray.

It has been so long on the way, in Austria, maybe the wrecking car should go out and tow in that Hapsburg coup.

Things are humming so, industrially, a mid-western enterprise is changing its three-story factory from five stories on the letterhead to seven.

Editorial of the Day

CITIZENS AND JURY SERVICE
(From the Memphis Commercial Appeal.)

All good citizens must applaud the sentiments of Judge John C. Stennis, of the sixteenth Mississippi circuit, who, in an address before the Columbus Rotary Club the other day, appealed to the membership to take a deeper interest in the operation of the courts. The judge is interested particularly in jury service.

Pointing out that courts cannot hope to rise above their juries, Judge Stennis believes that the press can perform a real service if it encourages competent and experienced citizens to make themselves available for jury duty. He expressed his disappointment over the widespread opposition among businessmen and community leaders generally to service on juries and very properly intimated that, if justice should sometimes go astray, such citizens have little cause to complain.

The truth is, that Judge Stennis only scratched the surface. He was dealing with the present situation. The real cause of opposition to jury service among the more substantial class of citizens goes back much farther than a mere disinclination to perform a public duty. It goes back farther even than the valid and sincere belief by many citizens that their businesses would suffer if they were away. The real opposition lies in the profound and complete dislike the average, up-and-going, progressive citizen has for the vexatious, annoying and befuddling procedure of our antiquated court system.

The peculiar thing about it all is that we inherited these burdensome practices from England, the England of 200 years ago. England long ago recognized them as relics of a past age and set about reforming them. The result is that today the jury system, while still benefit of much of its ancient purity and strength, nevertheless functions smoothly, easily and efficiently. The English judge, instead of being a mere referee, is an active participant in the trial and directs its course in both law and fact.

Some day an enlightened leadership will tackle the problem without risking the charge of radicalism. The sooner that leadership appears, the sooner will citizens take an interest in their courts and aid them in their honorable and necessary mission of doing justice. If the courts are to remain the bulwark of a free people, they must themselves be free.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON.

SOFTER BATTLES WASHINGTON, May 12.—Labor Behemoth CIO hates anything connected with AFL crafts. His Lewis sent around specifications calling for remodeling the University Club palace here into a United Mine Workers' headquarters palace, the final stipulation he made was substantially this:

In any work to be done, only Mr. Green's AFL craft union labor shall be employed.

The humor of Mr. Lewis providing jobs for the workers of Mr. Green is one thing. The hint that this battle of the behemoths has lately turned into something more of a family affair is another.

For instance, there is the fact (few people know it) that Mr. Green has never been expelled from the Lewis United Mine Workers' Union. Furthermore, the Lewis CIO unions have not been expelled from the AFL. They merely have suspended each other.

That seems to sum up their real relationship behind their embattled headlines. They are in a state of suspension, possibly permanent suspension, but by no means as bitter suspension as they were some weeks ago.

SIDETRACKING This probably will be denied ardently. It may be said Mr. Lewis had no love for Mr. Green, but only self-preservation in mind when he wrote his palace specifications. He cannot expect the AFL and Mr. Lewis would rather get labor from the enemy than from non-union classes. The fact that he specified it may be explained by the assertion that contractors were timid about taking the job for fear of Lewis-Green labor troubles on it.

After all this has been explained, however, there will still remain the fact that Mr. Lewis has not kicked out Mr. Green and vice versa.

It seems the United Mine Workers' executive committee discovered it did not have the power to expel Mr. Green because he appealed to a local union for a hearing of the charges. His local is at Coshocton, Ohio, and when the matter went there, no one around here heard of it thereafter. Incidentally, there seems to be a deep inside disposition to leave the matter in Coshocton.

Similarly, the AFL executive committee does not seem to be making any headway in its attempt to suspend Lewis. There is a fairly good tip around that the suspension will not develop into an expulsion even at the next convention.

Bystanders, statesmen and others seem to be agreed this is the best way. A separation is usually better than an outright divorce. It leaves the possibility that something will happen to prevent the divorce.

ALIMONY Rumors are running around the capital that the reason the AFL will not suspend the Lewis unions is that it cannot afford to lose the revenue from them. The facts are these: The CIO diversion cost the A. F. of L. 893,000 members, but on April 30 it had 2,884,577 members left. Most of these members pay 1 cent a month. The loss of the Lewis unions, therefore, would seem to represent loss to the A. F. of L. of about $9,830 per month. But the revenue received from remaining members is certainly sufficient to keep it going.

Furthermore, this loss already has been sustained. The suspended CIO unions are not paying dues now.

CIO finances are not so readily ascertainable. The CIO does not have a general levy upon members of its various unions. The unions appropriate sums from their treasuries for its operation from time to time. In these new steel and auto unions which have been organized by CIO, a levy system is supposed to have been put into effect, but it has not been operating long enough to become productive.

PROMOTION The coronation caused hardly a ripple of official interest here. It has been accepted somewhat as the world's fair in New York in 1939.

Few officials know the new king, but those who do like him. They call him "dearable like his father" in contradistinction to Windsor, whom these same people regard as something of a harum-scarum. They never knew what he was going to do next.

The feeling prevails that King George will slowly become more and more popular among his own people, although they doubt that he will, in the long run, approximate that of his father or the former Prince of Wales.

PUBLICITY Chairman Wheeler of the senate railroad finance investigation received a telegram from a mysterious international leagues (and American Association) for Peace. It reads like this:

"When you first started your investigation, the Spanish war broke. When you started up the second time, the Hindenburg crashed. The third time brought the coronation. In the interest of peace (and your own publicity) won't you please stop?"

SILHOUETTES

By RALPH T. JONES.

He hungered for gold
And closed his eyes
To everything else
In life.
He struggled and fought
'Til he grew old
Where greed and self Run rife.

And he never saw,
Through all his days,
The gold in a Goldenrod.
He never guessed
The bright sun's rays
Bring wealth direct From God.

A Grand Experience.
Tuesday, at noon, went for luncheon to the Community Home for Girls, on invitation of Mrs. Armstrong, who is the director, the manager and the mother of the place. Found there the members of the board of women who are responsible for the home as well as members of the county and city governments.

Found also a dinner so bounteous and delicious it will remain in memory for a long time as a mark for all these extensive hotels and clubs around town to aim at. Hopefully, the only regrettable thing from a culinary standpoint is that possibly the cook felt hurt because so much of the food on my plate went back to the kitchen. But, dear cook, at three times my normal midday allotment and had to stop when I did for fear of digestive punishment through the long hours of the night. As it was, that strawberry pie was too tempting to resist, even after I had determined to eat no more. Maybe pay will be exacted for that—please, have we any bicarbonate?

A Family to Arouse Pride.

The girls who constitute the family of this home are such as to warrant pride in any parents, be they real parents or foster parents, such as Mrs. Armstrong and the ladies of her board. Sweet-looking, smart, intelligent. In fact, a cross-section of clever American girlhood.

True, they are girls who have found in the past, life a little too hard for them. That is why they are so happy at having found a refuge in this home. They are girls who, from poverty, lack of normal home life in childhood, mischance, fate, bad luck, call it what you will, have found themselves in need of sympathetic help at a crucial period of life.

That they are the stuff of which grand womanhood is made is self-evident when you meet them. And the proof is in the long roster of girls who formerly lived in the home who are now succeeding independently in life, either in salaried positions or in woman's more important and more natural task, making homes of their own for their own loved ones.

Why Not Triple Support?

Today the home is supported, entirely, by Fulton county. It is capable of providing for 30 girls a maximum. It is the old, dilapidated building, built in a modern structure in a more suitable location and it should find a way to provide for five times the number.

Why can't the city and state join with the county and make a substantial and dividing-paying institution a triply supported place? Girls admitted there come from Fulton county, from the city of Atlanta and from other sections of the state, too.

They constitute a group unprovided for through other welfare channels. Yet, they return, in citizenship dividends, as great a profit on investment as any human material can.

All three governments are woe-fundamental as long as they permit such a place as this to continue in penury and to see so many turned away because of financial lack.

Twenty-Five Years Ago Today.
From The Constitution of Monday, May 13, 1912:
"New York, May 12.—Standing upon the bridge of the Carmania in mid-ocean last Thursday evening, Mrs. J. H. Loring, of New York and London, scattered armfuls of flowers upon the waters of the Atlantic in memory of her husband, who lost his life on the Titanic."

And Fifty Years Ago.
From The Constitution of Friday, May 13, 1887:
"George Cobb, who rolls an ice cream wagon about town, was arrested yesterday by Patrolmen Christopher and Taylor. Cobb was booked for selling ice cream without a restaurateur's license inside the fire limits."

Fake Proclamation.
On May 18, 1864, a presidential proclamation echoed from one end of the states loyal to the Washington government to another, calling for 400,000 volunteers and shocked President Lincoln. For it was a fake. Gold speculators put it out to rig the market. From fears it aroused, it created fortunes that are respectable now.

World's Window

By PIERRE VAN PAASSEN.

Germany Turns East.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal.—In the wings of the opera-bouffe which is playing on the Rumanian national scene with its court scandals, intrigues, royal lovers, mistresses and divorces, a sinister, highly significant battle is going on for the control of the country's resources. Germany is doing her utmost to bring Rumania within the orbit of her influence and . . . is fast succeeding.

All competent military observers are convinced that the highly mechanized German army cannot fight at present because of a serious lack of oil. Rumania has that oil. Rumania also has the wheat which could feed the German population in the event of war. The present German food shortage would be solved at once if Herr Schacht, the director of the Reich's economy, could barter German manufactured articles for Rumania's food and raw materials. The shrewd Herr Schacht is in Rumania now trying to arrange such an exchange.

Rumania itself is in a state of effervescence and turmoil. The Iron Guard, a Fascist organization, which is bound to seize power one of these days, is agitating for the expulsion of the million Jews from Rumania, or failing expulsion simply to have a big bloody cleanup. Of course such a move would in no way improve the gravely distressed national economy of Rumania, nor is it intended to effect any improvement. The Iron Guard works for Germany with German money and is simply using the Jewish angle as a screen to foster German economic penetration.

In addition, and this is the real object of Germany's activity in the Balkan kingdom; the load of Odessa and the Ukrainian wheat fields, which Herr Hitler craves, lies through Rumania. It has long been known that the German high command does not feel very much for fighting a war against Russia in the frozen wastes of the Baltic region. To go through Rumania would be much easier.

That is why Iron Guard influence is strongly supported by Dr. Goebbels' Nazi propaganda machine and money recently brought Nicholas Titulesco to a fall, the Rumanian foreign minister, who favored attachment to the French Alliance in the Little Entente and even rapprochement with Russia. He was one of the chief obstacles in Germany's way and he nearly died from poisoning not long ago in Switzerland. During his illness he was forced out of office and now lives in France.

Germany supports Germany in her penetration of the Balkan kingdom. Yet the battle is not entirely won for the two dictators. There is still a powerful anti-Fascist democratic current in Rumania. A contest for predominance is not excluded. On the outcome of that contest depends to a large extent when Germany will finally move eastward to fulfill, as Hitler says, her historic destiny.

GOOD MORNING

By LOUIE D. NEWTON

Mr. Scott Hudson, beloved Atlanta citizen, is remembered by many horse lovers as the driver of the blind stallion in a number of outstanding races back in 1902. This blind horse, named Rhythmic, was known to have racing ability, but no one had been able to handle him. Mr. Hudson, then a young man, asked for the privilege of taking him in hand for one more training effort. The owner consented. After some weeks of careful and strenuous training, the day of the Bonner Memorial race came.

At the Bonner Memorial race day at the track, Mr. Hudson was announced as the driver of the blind stallion. He was victorious. Ella Wheeler Wilcox, along with millions of other Americans, read the story of this dramatic race of a persistent young American holding a blind horse to the race and winning under the tape ahead of the field. She wrote the following poem:

The record was this when the race was done—
The great blind conqueror Rhythmic won.
He sped in the dark though the sun rose high
In the cloudless arch of an August day.
The world for him was a ball of black,
But he heard his master, he felt the track,
He trusted the hands on the reins,
That the one on the whip was Love's hand, too.
He saw not the path where his feet must fall;
To the eyes of his driver he trusted all.
Faith and courage and strength and speed
They won the day for the brave, blind steed.
Great is the lesson, O mortal blind,
God is the Master His whip is kind;
Trust in His purpose though lost in night.

The hand of the Driver will guide aright;
Courage and faith and an even pace
And God's eyes guarding will win the race.

A great poem, based on a great fact, and a good lesson for all who desire to run well in the race which is set before us.

When the Town Marshal's Zeal

Began to Hurt Business, He Was Soon Out of a Job

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

We are theoretically all one people, yet each section has a little grudge against the others and nothing infuriates us more than interference in our local affairs by citizens of another state.

Most of us are by nature and training devoted to the idea of local self-government. And yet the most ardent supporters of state rights are tolerating and thus silently encouraging abuses that will slowly but surely destroy all respect and sympathy for state government.

Our forefathers, crossing this land from ocean to ocean without official permit, got the idea that all of it belonged to all of them—that they possessed the natural right to travel where they pleased without let or hindrance. And that idea is part of our inheritance. When a car with a "commercial body" comes to a state line, the experienced driver now expects to pay an entrance fee. He will spend several dollars at filling stations, stores or restaurants before leaving the state, and thus pay his way by making the state richer, but in some instances this is not considered enough. The people of the state are taxed to build and maintain the highways, and they think the alien should pay to use them. So an officer at the state line sells him a permit.

This is annoying, but in at least one state the annoyance is greater. There is no office or officer at the line to sell the traveler a permit. He is allowed to enter and drive several miles, and then is arrested and fined for not having the permit which he has had no opportunity to buy.

When this happens to several hundred traveling men, a considerable section of public opinion begins to hate the idea of state sovereignty.

The constitution forbids any state to levy an import tax on products of other states. But some of them have found a way to evade the fundamental law, and others are adopting it by way of reprisal. The scheme is beautifully simple. If a state can produce horses but not mules, it imposes a tax of 10 cents a pound on each mule sold. Since horseflesh has none to sell, the tax doesn't bother them. And horse raisers have their market nicely protected from alien mule raisers.

But every time a state product is protected in that way, another section of public opinion is offended. There are other cases of complaint—conflicting divorce laws and extradition among them—and each one is an argument for centralized authority. Unless the states get together and quit abusing their power, they are likely to lose it all in our time.

THIS MORNING

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES II.

"Upon what meat doth this our Caesar feed,
That he is grown so great?"

Modern purveyors would have us believe that modern Caesars grow great on "Kansas City" or "Prime Western" meats alone. As a matter of increasing fact, it could be Alabama, Georgia, Mississippi, Carolina, Florida or Tennessee meat. The use of the terms "Kansas City" or "Western" as exclusively synonymous with excellence in meats is unfair to the cattle-raising, meat-packing industry now developing in the south, and we, for one, find the terms increasingly irritating on southern cards and bills of fare. Now that the Big Five packers have come south and that, on some southern farms, meat cattle of the first order are being raised, southerners need to learn to believe their land capable of the best in meats. They need to be told about and to recognize and patronize their own meats as they become the best meats.

To "buy at home" where the product is inferior is bad economics and silly patriotism. But where the product is equal to the best a failure to buy at home is both snobbish and uneconomic. Not all southern meat is first class, but more and more of it is getting to be, and it deserves the patronage of southern people. To that end, it is time to eliminate the word "western" from the term "prime western" for meats sold in the south. It is time to let meat sell here on their merits, and if they happen to be southern meats and to have most excellent merits, so much the better for all of us.

The Annual Fat Cattle Show and Sale at Montgomery last week was occasion for the largest sale of registered cattle ever held in the south. The prize monies and trophies awarded, improvements in average quality indicated, the enthusiastic attention given the show by farmers and packers and food distributors were eloquent of another vast new industry developing in the south, a modern nobility of herds and hay to keep company with the ancient aristocracies of cotton. The development is worth advertising. It is worth recognition on bills of fare of registered cattle, at least the negative extent of not being discriminated against with such words as "Kansas City" and "western."

And some day it is going to be worth the words "Prime Southern" on both southern and federal national menu cards. The words of course, will come to the southern cards last. It needs national recognition to make the south recognize itself in economic matters. That's no lady, that's my wife! psychology, strong in all people, is especially strong in southerners where their economic goods are concerned. Proud as they may be of their history, they have great difficulty in learning a proper pride in their present, particularly in their economic present—

OPPOSES REPEAL

Editor Constitution: As a citizen of Georgia and a reader of your paper, I am very much impressed with an editorial in the Constitution of Sunday, May 2, regarding the drunkenness of some former policemen of Atlanta.

We do not need repeal in Georgia but need more men of the caliber of Mayor Hartsfield and Chief Hornsby as officers. As to revenue "To help finance the Rivers new deal program, is it worth while to destroy the mental and moral responsibility of our citizens (together with the lives of thousands who come in contact with the guns in the hands of the irresponsible) in order to do that?"

To raise two million dollars in revenue in Georgia from repeal of the prohibition law, wouldn't the people of the state have to drink fifty million dollars worth of legalized liquor? How much of this fifty million would go out of the state? Money spent for liquor does not buy food or clothes.

Why try to justify the repeal of the law with the argument that the bootleggers are selling it and the state getting no revenue, when the facts show that repeal has never stopped bootlegging in any state or community.

ROSTER OF SPANISH WAR VETS NEEDED

Editor Constitution: Please accept the thanks of the Spanish War Veterans for your article about Sergeant Dan Daley. It was a grand article and the best expression of the average veterans feeling I ever read.

The Spanish War veteran enlisted voluntarily, without being drafted, expected nothing, and did not ask for anything till 20 years after the war. Then they got mostly what they asked for and appreciated it and have been generously treated by most of the public and statesmen since. But a good many cases, similar to Sergeant Daley's, have been overlooked. If they were properly brought to the attention of the proper officials they would be adjusted.

A complete roster of every man of Georgia that served in the army or navy in the Spanish-American War has been sadly neglected in Georgia. We should have one. There is a roster of the state troops at the state capitol in Atlanta but no record of the 3rd U. S. N. I., 3rd U. S. N. E. and a good many other organizations that were organized or partly organized in the state.

Georgia, according to population, ranked sixth in men furnished to the Spanish-American War by only counting her state troops, but if she got credit for all men furnished other organizations she would rank among the first.

The adjutant's office in Atlanta has no record of the Georgia state troops. Please help me to get this record of Georgia troops for these men who composed the only 100 per cent volunteer army the world ever knew. They are proud of their record as they fought for humanity's sake only, no comment of greed or commercialism.

WARM PRAISE FOR MISS THOMPSON

Editor Constitution: No doubt many of your readers thoroughly appreciate the literary ability of Dorothy Thompson, and particularly the masterpiece published in last Tuesday's Constitution.

Compared with the usual newspaper editorial, which too often only timidly suggests protest, or a reform movement, Dorothy Thompson's article on the Spanish War "Mothers and Children First," is a splendid, and courageous example for other writers to follow. Dorothy Thompson's voice of protest against the superbarbaric slaughter of women and children in Spain, should be heard and joined by a thousand tongues shouting their protest from the houseposts.

Possibly I am somewhat prejudiced, never having been affiliated with any religious organization, but it seems to me strange that so many people who profess their adherence to Christian principles, from the lowliest camp-meeting member to the Pope at Rome, in reality do very little, or even raise their voices in protest against the darkest stain on our civilization.

When innocent babies and their mothers are blown to pieces with bombs from aeroplanes without a chance to escape, it is high time that every Christian should raise a protesting voice as Dorothy Thompson has already done.

Never has a newspaper had a better feature than the daily editorial "On the Record." You are to be most highly commended for your excellent judgment. Dorothy Thompson is incomparable.

Editor Constitution: In your editorial, "Proved to Kill," appearing in The Constitution on April 24, 1937, I have noticed that reference is made to a statement by Inspector W. H. Drane Lester, of our bureau.

I want to express to my appreciation for putting before your readers a situation which is vital to every American. I sincerely feel that when we have a parole system in effect we will have made a step forward in the elimination of the criminal element.

Lawrence Calls President's Aims Sincere But Declares He Uses Mistaken Methods

"Nine Honest Men"

By DAVID LAWRENCE.

CHAPTER XIX.

The March of the "Devils."

If those of us who disagree with the President on his proposal to enlarge the supreme court are to bring to bear in the crisis that faces the nation today the pressure of a persuasive opinion, we must be ready to examine objectively the circumstances that prompted Mr. Roosevelt to proceed as he did to endeavor to point out to him that the very course of the era which he so ardently espouses faces an even greater threat because of his mistaken methods.

Mr. Roosevelt wants social and economic reform because he feels government in a peculiar sense today responsible for the welfare of the average man, to the point of individual aid and sustenance. His theory is that the supreme court by its conservative decisions stands in the way, that amendments to the constitution take too much time, and that because the end justifies the means an act of congress which seeks to force, even by sheer humiliation the retirement of justices, is a more direct solution.

The President smiles at suggestions that he wishes to acquire unprecedented power. He ridicules the intimations from his critics that he wants to make himself a dictator.

And anybody who thinks that Franklin Delano Roosevelt has embarked on his present course because he consciously looks toward dictatorship or because he deliberately wants to break down the American system has as much misapprehension as Mr. Roosevelt himself has. Mr. Roosevelt is not a dictator.

One must start with the assumption that the President sincerely believes he is doing for the people that which in the long run is for their maximum advantage. Any other premise is misleading and illogical. Mr. Roosevelt is entitled to the benefit of any doubt which may arise as to the significance of his latest proposal to enlarge the supreme court. He may be a bad tactician but he is by no means, therefore, a bad American.

Tragedy of Situation. The tragedy of what is happening is that Mr. Roosevelt has become too much enveloped in the atmosphere of partisan passion. He has lived these last four years in the midst of so much class conflict that neither he nor his advisers really can see what havoc they themselves have wrought.

Consider then the march of the "devils." The term "devil" is used in the sense that Henry Wallace, secretary of agriculture, used it in his book, "The New Frontier," published in 1934, in which he said that "one of the greatest handicaps to a smoothly functioning, intelligent democracy, is the belief in personal devils." He referred to the railroad devil, the Wall Street devil, the money trust, the army of devils from middleman to speculator. Wrote Mr. Wallace:

"When we treat the money power as a devil and try to put him in jail and torture him, we all too often hurt ourselves tenfold. The evils in our faulty money system have caused us great harm. But in order to get rid of the evils we must go on to a definite careful measured understanding of our problem. It will not do us a particle of good to assume that the bankers and speculators are trying to such our life blood and that therefore we should destroy them and their works."

Futility or Revolution. "In this direction lies either futility or revolution which will destroy many, but which will eventually build up another system with probable even greater abuses." But we have witnessed in the last few years a parade of "devils" with a sequence of events that may involve the gravest consequences for the American system. It may, as Mr. Wallace prophesies, bring a dreary civil war in America as it has in other countries of the world. For the clash is too fundamental to be brushed aside as alien. What has happened abroad can happen here for the simple reason that some of it is already happening here!

Scapagoats Pointed Out. Back in 1932 and 1933, the American people were taught to believe that a few bad men in the banks and investment houses brought on a panic which caused the loss of billions of dollars and ruined the lives of millions of individuals.

The senate investigating committees by the deft handling of testimony marshaled the forces of hate and pointed to scapagoats in the financial world. Not a word of blame for the millions of individuals who speculated, who sought something for nothing. Not a word of blame for the public officers, Democrat and Republican, in the state governments who, though possessed of ample constitutional power, never moved an inch to break down the fraudulent sale of securities and the misuse of trust funds before their very eyes.

Instead the men who managed our banking institutions were held up as a class to the worst abuse ever heaped on a group of men in America. Today the masses in America distrust all bankers, commercial and investment. It takes only a reading of Mr. Roosevelt's own inaugural address of March 4, 1933, to find therein a bitter theme on the "money changers"—the first devil use to arouse the passions of American citizens. . . . And hate marches on!

"The Nine Old Men"

By DREW PEARSON AND ROBERT ALLEN.

CHAPTER XIX.

The March of the "Devils."

Probably the most beautiful friendship which ever existed on the supreme court was that between Louis Brandeis and Oliver Wendell Holmes.

When Holmes was still on the bench, the two men drove to and from the capital together every day in a rented automobile, and after he retired he took walks in the late afternoon when the weather permitted. It was one of these occasions that Holmes, then 92, paused to gaze in frank admiration at a beautiful young girl who passed them. He even turned to look at her as she continued down the street. Then, turning to Brandeis, he sighed: "Ah! What wouldn't I give to be 70 again!"

Holmes was a prodigious reader, but his taste ran to the classics and general literature. He was also enormously fond of paperback French novels, which he read by the score, heaping them in piles on the floor of his library as he consumed them. To counteract this "low literary" taste, Brandeis once informed Holmes that he would send him some worthwhile summer reading.

Several weeks later a large box sent by the library of congress reached Holmes at his Massachusetts home. He had his servant take off the lid, and he scanned the upper layer of books. They dealt with workmen's compensation acts, insurance laws, labor codes and similar subjects. Holmes read the titles.

"John, put this box down in the cellar," he ordered his servant and returned to his paper-backed novels. In the fall Holmes sent the box of books, untouched, back to the library.

Justice Holmes played an important personal role in the lives of the Nine Old Men. He was a focal point, a common meeting ground, someone they all loved, even two such diametrically opposite characters as McReynolds and Brandeis. They all came to see him, even Mrs. Mahlon Pitney, widow of the justice whom Sutherland succeeded. Once, on one of her visits, Mrs. Pitney poured out a sad tale about a robber who had backed up a truck to the rear door of her vacant home and carted away all the furnishings. However, the police had caught the culprit, Mrs. Pitney continued, and put him in jail. There she went to visit him in his cell.

Talks With a Thief. Mrs. Pitney talked at great length to Justice Holmes about her meeting with the thief.

"I tried to find out how ever he had embarked on a career of crime," she explained. "I tried to point out the error of his ways, and I hope it did some good. I was there when he was talked to for two hours."

"Poor man, poor man," nodded Holmes sympathetically.

Justice Holmes delighted in reminiscing about the Civil War, in which he fought for three years, having been promoted from the rank of lieutenant to lieutenant colonel and having been wounded three times: in the breast at Ball's Bluff, in the neck at Antietam and in the foot at Fredericksburg. "It wasn't bad—when you were on the general staff," he used to say. "The officers got champagne for dinner, but what I really liked were those great big cocktails before breakfast."

Abhors War. Actually, Holmes abhorred war, and his fondest ambition was to make some slight contribution toward keeping the United States out of another war.

After he retired from the bench at the age of 91, Justice Holmes gaily told his friends that for the first time he was really enjoying life. While on the court, he complained, he had to work too hard. Once when he was about to drive out to Winchester, Va., to see the famous apple blossoms, a court messenger arrived with an opinion to be read.

"The goddamned fertility of my colleagues will kill me," he exclaimed as he canceled his trip.

During recent days of bitter internal strife among the justices of the supreme court, Brandeis has retained his poise and does not indulge in personal malice. No matter how heated the debate inside the court, he remains cool and collected. Even toward Justice McReynolds, who opposed his confirmation and who has cast snarling aspersions on his religious faith, Brandeis remains mild-mannered and on the surface friendly.

Story of a Lost Case.

Once while visiting in the Brandeis home, Drew Pearson, Walter Hamilton, of Yale, told this story to a group of the guests, including the justice. A lawyer from Wyoming, with the picturesqueness of a cowboy and an even more picturesque method of speech, was arguing a case before the supreme court while Justice Holmes still was on the bench, and despite a most impassioned appeal to the court, full of the language of the frontier, he lost. As he concluded, Holmes, who sat on the right of Hughes, leaned over and from one of his loud, hoarse whistles, said:

"Can't we hear that old bird again?"

The clerk of the court heard the remark and afterward advised the cowboy lawyer that, if he applied for a rehearing, it might be granted. This was done. In the rehearing, the lawyer opened his appeal to the court with these words:

"I come to you as John the Baptist saying 'Repent ye, repent ye.'"

Whereupon Justice McReynolds, who was enjoying the performance almost as much as Justice Holmes, leaned forward and said:

"But are you not aware of what happened to John the Baptist?"

"Yes, I am quite aware," was the immediate response. "He lost his head through the influence of a harlot. But I know the supreme court would not be so influenced."

At this point in Professor Holmes' lecture, the audience burst into laughter.

liton's narration of the story, Justice Brandeis, who had been listening, came to the defense of his colleague.

"I do not believe that Justice McReynolds made such a remark," he said. And, turning on his heel, he walked out.

Justice Brandeis is an old man now and unconsciously, perhaps, has been training Stone and Cardozo to carry on the fight when he is gone. He conserves his energy carefully now, and after the drag of the winter looks forward to a little rest eagerly to his summer in Cape Cod.

But, despite his age, the old crusading fervor still is there. Less tenacious warriors would have surrendered long before, been content to pass their declining years dozing peacefully on the sidelines. But not Brandeis. The philosophic calm of age and long experience is there, the calm that prompts the defense of a colleague no matter how diametrically opposite his colleague's views. But behind it all, behind those deepest, piercing eyes, the old Brandeis is still crusading.

Class Struggle. It is not a crusade for any group or class. Brandeis has no idea of the class struggle. Labor unions fall in the same category as corporations, if they are big. They tend to crush out individualism. And Brandeis' crusade is for the individual.

Perhaps the finest exposition of economic democracy ever handed down from the supreme court was Brandeis' dissent in the Oklahoma case, in which he said:

"I cannot believe that the framers of the fourteenth amendment, or the states which ratified it, intend to leave us helpless to correct the evils of technological employment and excessive productive capacity which the march of invention and discovery has entailed. There must be power in the states and nation to remodel through experimentation our economic practices to meet changing social conditions. . . . Denial of the right of such experimentation may be fraught with serious consequences to the nation."

Crusading Fervor Missing. But despite the challenge in those words, Brandeis read them in a listless voice. The crusading fervor was not there. But in the chain-store decision, it was another story. Then it was another Brandeis speaking, a Brandeis with all the passion and vigor of his turbulent, crusading youth.

For now he was rendering a decision against bigness, against the chain stores which threatened to crush the life of the small merchant.

Brandeis is the greatest legalist on the court. But to him law is a means to an end. He looks first at the long-range objective and its relation to wages, hours, production, capitalization, profits, then he figures out the legal steps to justify that objective. In other words, the objective is based upon the economic factors involved. The law by which it is achieved is just a trick of the trade.

Or, as Judge Joseph C. Hutchinson, of the United States district court, Texas, describes judicial method: "Having heard the cause and determined that the decision ought to go this way or that, he (the judge) then takes up his search for some category of the law into which the case will fit."

Good Word for Bankers.

"You should be kind to the bankers," Brandeis told Ferdinand Pecora during the latter's investigation for the senate banking committee. "Bankers are not men of ingenuity. It's always the lawyers who develop the chicanery."

But when it was suggested that the lawyers instead of the bankers be investigated, Brandeis replied: "That would be useless. Who would do the cross-examining?"

On the bench Brandeis is just as prejudiced as his reactionary colleague, Justice Butler. Both are attempting to disseminate from the bench the philosophy they preached and practiced before they rose to fame. Their methods are the same. Their objectives are totally dissimilar.

"Property is only a means," says Justice Brandeis. "It has been a frequent error of our courts that they have made the means an end. . . . Instead of amending the constitution, I would amend men's economic and social ideals."

That is the difference between Brandeis and Butler. Butler has spent his years on the supreme court proselyting to protect property. Brandeis has spent his years crusading to better men's economic and social ideals.

And through the hosts of young disciples who gather round him, through his hints to those in high office, through his economic writings which Roosevelt paraphrased in his inaugural speech, and, most of all, through the masterful logic of his opinions, the unquenchable crusading fervor of Lord Brandeis will live and bear fruit long, long after he has passed away.

SENATE VOTES FUND FOR TENNESSEE DAM

Gilbertsville Construction To Cost $112,000,000 Is Termed Necessary.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—(AP)—Proponents of a major dam on the lower Tennessee river won their fight in the senate today for approval of actual construction. The vote was 48 to 29.

The proposed dam and reservoirs, "at or near Gilbertsville, Ky.," will cost $112,000,000. Chairman A. E. Morgan, of the Tennessee Valley Authority, has estimated, and already has cost $1,000,000 in preliminary investigations. The house at odds with the senate on TVA appropriations, approved the spending of $739,000 at Gilbertsville for additional investigation only. The beginning of investigations at Watts Bar and Coulter's Shoals, Tenn., was also approved.

The amendment did not increase the total appropriation for the TVA, fixed at $40,166,270 plus an authorization to contract for $4,000,000 additional spending for machinery and equipment.

Senator George Norris, of Nebraska, author of the TVA act, said the Gilbertsville dam was a necessary unit, and the largest one, in the TVA program, congress is definitely committed to that program, he said, and to date has spent about $200,000,000 on it.

DOCTOR DISCUSSES GOITER TREATMENT WITH IODIZED SALT

Georgia Medical Body Is Addressed by Ford Hospital Surgeon.

MACON, Ga., May 12.—(AP)—Dr. Roy D. McClure, of Detroit, described to the Medical Association of Georgia tonight the effects of using iodized salt to combat goitre.

He told the Georgia physicians assembled in convention, of a program begun in Michigan in 1924 and said that "the incidence of endemic goitre or enlarged thyroid has been reduced almost to nil since iodized salt has been so widely used."

Among other conclusions drawn from the study by Dr. McClure, surgeon-in-chief of the Henry Ford hospital, were:

1. "The number of operations for toxic diffuse and toxic nodular goitre has rapidly and steadily decreased after the apex of the second year increase had been reached."
2. "We now see no cases which show the slightest ill effects from the use of iodized salt."
3. "There was no increase in hyperthyroidism excepting in the nodular goitre or adenomatous group."

Other Speakers.
Others who addressed the convention tonight were Charles Franklin Craig, of New Orleans, professor of tropical medicine at the Tulane University School of Medicine, and Olin West, of Chicago, secretary of the American Medical Association.

At the afternoon session, the physicians heard Dr. Robert L. Rhodes, of Augusta, urged prompt and thorough cleaning of compound fractures.

Otherwise, he warned, "100 per cent of compound fractures will develop infections to a greater or less degree."

"Immediate thorough cleansing is the keynote and should be delayed only in the presence of shock." In this, he said, surgical cleansing should be included.

He warned against the use of "any corrosive chemical" for cleansing or sterilization.

Several other papers were read during the day, including one by Dr. Isaac A. Abt, of Chicago, professor of pediatrics at Northwestern University. He told the 375 doctors registered at the convention of the nutritional importance of vitamins and hormones.

"Each vitamin," he said, "has a relationship to the cells of the germinal layer. There is a complicated interplay between vitamins, hormones, mineral substances and the basic food substances."

The morning session was called to order by Dr. B. H. Minchew, of Waycross, state president. The conference will continue through Friday.

Headlining tomorrow's activities will be addresses by Governor Rivers, Dr. Minchew, and Dr. Olin West, secretary of the American Medical Association.

BROOKS SOLIDLY IN PRIZE SEARCH

Royal Daniel, editor and publisher of the Free Press and recognized as one of the state's leading editors, has been one of the moving spirits in the active entry of Brooks into the awards campaign.

Decision of the civic organizations to co-operate actively in the awards program followed an appeal for suggestions by H. Turner Brice, chairman of the Brooks commission.

At the same time Chairman Brice announced definitely "Brooks is in this awards program, and we are specializing on health measures, giving special attention to the eradication of malaria, and the immunization of children against contagious diseases."

Scope Will Widen.
Thus far Brooks has centered its most telling blows in the awards program on health, but indications are now that the scope of the activities will be broadened to include many other suggested additions.

Installation of a new and modern telephone exchange, rural electrification, road paving, school improvements and many other proposals will get the attention of commissioners and the joint citizens committee from the civic organizations.

Although Brooks county has just definitely announced its formal entry into the awards drive, it has quietly executed many outstanding accomplishments in behalf of the health of its citizens.

A full-time and fully-manned health unit is in operation within the county. Every phase of public health is being pursued by Dr. M. Groover, health officer, and his staff of assistants. Dr. Groover yesterday pointed especially to the ravages of malaria.

"We are going to cut the death and ease rate of that disease especially," Dr. Groover asserted. "We propose to rid Brooks county of the disease with its attendant deaths and expense. It is senseless and unnecessary that citizens of this county should be forced to suffer from a disease which can be controlled. Our board of county commissioners are determined about this matter."

Every Phase Considered.
Chairman Brice concurred in this attitude, and pointed out that activities of the health unit are broad in scope, "encompassing every matter pertaining to the health of the people of our county."

Leading citizens proudly exhibited the new Brooks county hospital, which was completed last fall but which even now has been found inadequate to meet the demands of the modern fight against disease and to which a $30,000 addition is now being made "as one of Brooks' contributions in the awards program in behalf of its citizens."

Miss Naomi Ziltzour, superintendent of the hospital and the annex, pointed to the sun parlor which will connect the annex to the main structure and told of other outstanding features. Included in the long list of advantages which the long new addition will be an increase of bed capacity of the institution from 22 to 40 beds. A maternity delivery room, a nursery, nurses' quarters and an out-patient department also are included in the additional structure.

When the annex is completed, Brooks county will have as fine and modern a hospital as any county in Georgia, J. Brantley Baum, chairman of the public affairs committee of the Quiltman and Brooks county Kiwanis club, said.

"We're Going Ahead."
"I want to say that now that Brooks county already has entered the awards competition," Chairman Brice told civic leaders at a dinner held last night at the beautiful Quiltman Country Club, "we are going ahead with our plans, but we will welcome and will co-operate as far as possible in any suggestions which you may have for additions to our program. We have centered on health activities, believing health to be a major consideration in our county. We are willing to go as far as possible in making additions, however, and welcome your interest and co-operation in helping us solve our problems."

"Our commission is trying to do the best job possible for the people of this county. We want your help. I suggest that you form a committee to work with us and to make suggestions to us."

Chairman Brice's views were concurred in by Commissioner John Sheffield, who also was present, and civic leaders asserted that Roy Lawson, Frank Groover and A. J. Radford, other commissioners who could not attend last

DODD AMPLIFIES FASCIST CHARGES

Ambassador to Germany Attacked by Borah; Recall Sought.

BERLIN, May 12.—(AP)—Ambassador William E. Dodd today amplified his irrefragable charges against damages of Fascist dictatorship in the United States, disclosed yesterday with another warning against perils which would follow defeat of President Roosevelt's recovery program.

In a prepared statement the former University of Chicago history professor cited outstanding failures of great presidential plans, those of Presidents Jefferson, Lincoln, Cleveland, Theodore Roosevelt and Wilson.

He listed "judicial vetoes" among the causes for such defeats and said, "In every case the will of the people was defeated." The present situation, he asserted, involved "a similar and even more important series of popular decisions."

He reiterated his warning of activities of persons of great wealth in the United States looking toward Fascist rule but disclosed no identities. Yesterday he referred to "an American billionaire," today it was "certain great millionaires."

WASHINGTON, May 12.—(AP) Senator Borah, Idaho, Republican, characterized today as "the outpouring of his irresponsible scandalmonger," the statement by William E. Dodd, American ambassador to Germany, that a billionaire was plotting dictatorship in this country.

Federal Theater Play, 'Last Enemy,' Is Powerful Drama, Plea for Peace

By LEE ROGERS.

There is a more powerful duty than patriotism—a duty to peace. That members of the cast of the new Federal theater play, "The Last Enemy," successfully put across last night. It was done despite a few first night rough edges and the fact less than 100 persons were "out front."

"The Last Enemy," which opened a week's run at the Atlanta theater last night, is a powerful protest against war, money-hungry munition manufacturers and "old fashioned patriots." It is presented by the Federal theater which is allied with the Atlanta Theater Guild.

Best of Cast.
Best acting awards go to Clyde M. Waddell, playing as John Larabee, shell-shocked grandson of a great scientist who, in the realm of chemical electricity, discovered the most deadly war weapon yet devised.

John and two associates of his grandfather are charged with perpetuating the secret after the death of the scientist. John, still remembering the World War, decides the secret is too powerful for any man, including himself, to know. Around his efforts to destroy the formula hinges the plot of the play.

Roy Elkins, as the old-fashioned patriot who believed his formula should be given the War Department, succeeded in arousing his audience to hate. William Nunn, who made a hit in "Altars of Steel," recently, is good in the role of the scientist's assistant, Maurice Fain, the grouchy grandfather in the Broadway production "Around the Corner," is the scientist.

Heroine Talented.
Heroine of the play is Helen Stringfellow, of Birmingham, who nurses both John and his grandfather. She was not impressive until the final act. It was then, with facial expressions and body movement, she really demonstrated her talents.

Other members of the cast were Bailey Waller, as the man around the house; Mildred Seals as John's childhood playmate; Amasa B. Windham as a detective; Jack Barfield as the attorney; Grady Barrow and Vernon G. Williams as noted alienists.

The play is not perfect, but nevertheless it is good. Tonight and each succeeding night it should get better, particularly if the house is better filled.

Persons appreciating the legitimate stage will like "The Last Enemy" as directed by Clyde M. Waddell.

"Free farm homesteads have contributed a cornerstone of our free government. They have been a 'city of refuge,' affording a haven of safety where a citizen might reside, provide the necessities of life for his family, free from the threat of tenantry and serfdom."

GEORGE VI ASCENDS THRONE OF FAR-FLUNG EMPIRE

MASSED MILLIONS PAY THEIR TRIBUTE TO NEW EMPEROR

Youngest Princess Adds Human Touch to Parade of Pomp.

V, and with the young Edward there to see what would have been his destiny. Now she was reported leading the fight against government wishes that no member of her family attend the marriage of Edward, who sat with his beloved Wallis Warfield in a French chateau and listened by radio to the empire pageant.

King Gains Confidence.

The new King seemed nervous during the opening stages of the long service, but appeared to gain confidence as the ceremony progressed. Both he and Elizabeth were solemn, pale and unsmiling while in the abbey.

And while the well-rehearsed coronation was solemnized a half hour late, an estimated two millions waited along the procession road back to Buckingham.

More than 7,000 fainted among those who gathered through the night to cheer. It was the greatest crush London has known. Two died. A girl fell down an elevator shaft and a youth was killed fighting in the crowd.

Rain fell as the monarchs left the abbey in early afternoon, but the crowd stuck it out and there were cheers and shouts at every turn of the long route homeward, where George in the evening broadcast to the empire his thanks to his half-billion subjects.

"Inspiration of Day." "The Queen and I will always keep in our hearts the inspiration of this day," he said. "May we ever be worthy of the good will which I am proud to think surrounds us at the outset of my reign."

"I thank you from my heart, and may God bless you all." Seventy-seven hundred bejeweled and rich-robed peers and peeresses, lords and members of parliament, visiting royalty, envoys of Britain's dominions and of foreign governments watched the centuries-old ceremony of coronation, the placing of the crown which Edward renounced for love.

The climax came at 12:30 p. m. The venerable Archbishop of Canterbury stepped before the altar and took into his hands the crown of St. Edward.

"Lord God of Hosts."

He intoned in prayer: "O God, the crown of the faithful: bless we beseech Thee and sanctify this Thy servant, George our King; and as Thou dost this day set a crown of pure gold upon his head, so enrich his royal heart with Thine abundant grace, and crown him with all princely virtues, through the King Eternal, Jesus Christ, Our Lord."

Then reverently he placed the crown upon the King's bowed head.

There was a great shout: "God Save the King!"

Trumpets sounded. Guns in the tower of London boomed. The crowds outside took up the cry. Radio and cable carried the word and round the world in Britain's far-flung domain, other cannon roared and other crowds echoed the shout.

A new King was crowned. He had received the sceptre, "ensign of kingly power and justice." In clear and steady voice he had taken the oath to rule justly.

He was proclaimed under the blessing of the church to rule the peoples of Great Britain, Ireland, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, and the Union of South Africa, of the British possessions and territories and the Indian Empire. He was also priest, titular head of the English church and pledged to defense of the faith.

Scottish Queen. By his side was 37-year-old Elizabeth, born a Scottish commoner but with her own crown of gold and pledged to rule with him over Britain's half-billion subjects. Thus on the day and at the hour set for Edward of England, George accepted his brother's discarded mantle of kingship.

And all his family save Edward watched the glorious spectacle, while at the same moment a new dispute arose over the exile's marriage to Wallis Warfield, the American-born commoner that Britain would not have as Queen.

The great moment for the little princesses came when they put little coronets on their heads at the same time the archbishop crowned their mother, Queen Elizabeth.

Princess Margaret twirled her coronet to be sure to get the front part of her forehead, put it on quickly then looked doubtfully at her older sister and at her aunt, the Princess Royal, Countess of Harewood.

Still not sure that it was just right, she pushed the coronet to one side, then sat back on her hands to watch.

Queen's Parents. There were also the Queen's parents, the Earl and Countess of Strathmore, first to enter the royal box.

And there was the Duke of Gloucester, who gave "the brother's kiss" in dramatic homage to the King—as brother and third in line of succession. He performed the duty that would have fallen to George, had Edward remained as King.

London Streets Jammed as Crowds Await Coronation Procession, View Preliminaries

Hours before the coronation procession was to pass through the streets of London, crowds gathered along the route to be sure of a good view. A huge throng assembled at Buckingham Palace to see the start of the procession, as shown in the radiophoto above.

At Westminster Abbey, despite a drizzling rain, thousands gathered on the eve of the coronation in hopes of catching a glimpse of notables leaving after placing the finishing touches on plans for the ceremony. They waited for hours, many were rewarded and left for procession vantage points.

Here Is Invitation To Coronation Rites

LONDON, May 12.—(NANA). This is the wording of the document by which the Countess of Oxford and Asquith was commanded to Westminster Abbey to attend the coronation service:

"George, R. I."

"Right trusty and well beloved cousin, we greet you well."

"Whereas, the 12th day of May next is appointed for the solemnity of our royal coronation."

"These are to will and command you (all excuses set apart) to make your personal attendance on us at the time above mentioned, furnished and appointed as to your rank and quality, to do and perform all such services that shall be required and belong unto you."

"Whereof you are not to fail."

"And so we bid you most heartily farewell."

"Given at our court of St. James this 12th day of April in the first year of our reign."

By his majesty's command: (Signed) Norfolk.

Countess Dowager of Oxford and Asquith."

Thousands had waited the night through for the first procession.

The nobility in velvet and ermine and carrying their coronets began their entrance to the Abbey at 6 a. m., beneath cloudy skies.

American Envoys.

Promptly at 8:40 a. m., the great gilded gates of Buckingham Palace opened and the first of the procession moved toward the Abbey—a chain of royal limousines in one of which rode American Ambassador Robert W. Bingham and Special Envoys James W. Gerard, General John J. Pershing and Admiral Hugh Rodman.

There were Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin in open state carriage; empire and dominion heads; and the royal family escorted by Life Guards on black chargers, in crimson tunics and white buckskin breeches, black topknots and white plumes atop silver helmets.

There were the Little Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose in the glass coach with their aunt, the Princess Royal, and her elder son, the 14-year-old Viscount Lascelles.

At the abbey annex, footmen lowered the steps of the royal gold coach and the youthful Duke of Norfolk, Earl Marshal, of England, welcomed their majesties.

They were conducted into the Abbey, calm and serious, to be met by the venerable archbishop.

Oath Administered.

First came the recognition, the cry "God Save the King," as the archbishop turned to the four directions; then the administering of the oath; the anointing with Holy oil; presentation of the spurs and sword, placing of the crown, conduct to the throne and presentation of the Holy Bible.

Then a similar but briefer ceremony for the Queen.

From his perch in the last of a long row of choir stalls, the American Envoy Gerard leaned far forward to follow the ceremonial.

He was flanked by Russian Foreign Minister Maxim Litvinoff, and the Italian ambassador, Count Dino Grandi—who represented his country in the absence of a member of the Italian royal family.

Two hours after they entered the Abbey, the service was complete. The King and Queen retired and lunched in the Abbey.

George changed from the St. Edward's to the Imperial state crown, and the procession began its triumphant return to Buckingham, as the rain began in early afternoon.

Up through London, through lanes of cheering folk, among them 50,000 Americans, the procession wound—spectators hung from streamer girders, perched on rooftops, huddled against the rain in huge tiers of grand stands.

Through six miles of streets, up Northumberland avenue, past Charing Cross into Trafalgar Square, down narrow Cockspur street, Piccadilly, Regent street, to Oxford Circus and Hyde Park and back to the palace.

Revered Monarchs Appear at Buckingham Palace After Coronation

SHANGHAI CHINESE JAM BRITISH FETE

Police Reserves Called To Subdue 100,000 Attracted by Review.

SHANGHAI, May 12.—(UP)—Police reserves were called today to subdue 100,000 Chinese who jammed streets in the heart of the International Settlement during the British community's celebration of the coronation of King George.

Scores were injured, seven so badly they were taken to hospital.

The Chinese were attracted by a review of British regiments and marines culminating in a "tattoo." The throng soon became so great that traffic was tied up and a riot resulted.

British communities throughout China celebrated coronation day with unprecedented fervor and Chinese interest was particularly great because of continued reports of secret negotiations in London between Britain and Japan regarding China.

Zapanitis, who conferred here yesterday with Capanis, said the Greek-American Order of Aheps had promised the financial help.

The flight, he said, probably would not be undertaken before August or September since a plane was to be built and they wished to make further studies.

Princess Yawns, Squirms, Fidgets While Papa, Mama Get Crowned

Six-Year-Old Margaret Rose, Whose Coronet Doesn't Fit, Worries Queen Mother; Older Sister Dignified, But Even She Slips Once.

By HARRY L. PERCY. (Copyright, 1937, by United Press.) LONDON, May 12.—Uneasy is the head that wears a crown, Princess Margaret Rose found out today.

Her didn't fit. At the height of the ceremony in Westminster Abbey the coronet on the head of the King's younger daughter slid down over her ears.

She shoved it back on top of her head impatiently and went on trying to count the people in the abbey.

Queen Mother Mary told her to stop it. The Princess scratched her ear and went on counting, her lips moving and her finger stabbing the air. She could not touch the ground with her feet because of the height of the abbey chairs, but her legs swung back and forth.

Elizabeth Behaves. Princess Elizabeth was much better behaved than her six-year-old sister. The 11-year-old girl, first in line of succession to the throne, sat dignified and erect, holding the train of her robe over her arm.

Margaret Rose wiggled near the end of the ceremony and the Queen Mother looked daggers at her. Margaret Rose wiggled some more. Desperately, the Queen Mother handed the princess a pair of opera glasses. The wiggling ceased while the princess put the glasses to her eyes for some more counting.

Only once the Princess Elizabeth lost her dignity. That was when she first entered the abbey. The Duke of Norfolk, Earl Marshal of the coronation, bowed before her. Princess Elizabeth forgot to bow in return; she waved her hand at the Duke with a sort of "Howya, pal," gesture.

It was an exciting day for the Princesses. Neither of them slept well last night and they hurried through breakfast. After a brief visit with the King and Queen they went to the nursery to put on their royal robes.

Constitutional Crisis. Overnight there had been a constitutional crisis—the issue being whether Princess Margaret Rose was old enough to have a train on her robe. Princess Elizabeth had one, but the Queen Mother ruled that Margaret Rose was too young. Margaret Rose took the matter

SOLUTION IS SOUGHT FOR DUKE'S WEDDING

Royal Family, Government in Feud Over Edward's Coming Marriage.

LONDON, (Thursday) May 13. (UP)—King George VI, with the crown of the British empire placed firmly upon his head by the man who played a major role in driving Edward VII from the throne, today sought a solution to a feud raging over Edward's early marriage to Mrs. Wallis Warfield.

The behind-the-scenes controversy—between members of the royal family and leaders of the government who want to banish Edward into obscurity—smoldered beneath the coronation revelry of millions that went on through the night.

Word was whispered in court circles that the feud remained deadlocked; that there appeared scant hope of a solution until next week, probably after Edward announces the date of his marriage to the American-born divorcee who was dearer to him than his royal heritage.

The royal family—represented by the 41-year-old monarch who was crowned yesterday in the hallowed precincts of Westminster Abbey—wants to send one of its members to France for Edward's wedding.

Critics of Edward, including the tremulous Archbishop of Canterbury who placed the crown of empire of George VI's head yesterday, are sternly opposed.

As far as the King and the royal circle are concerned, whether he sends a representative—probably the handsome Duke of Kent—will be largely influenced by Edward's and Mrs. Warfield's decision between a church or civil ceremony.

$100,000 LOVE SUIT GOES TO JURY TODAY

DETROIT, May 12.—(UP)—A jury of six married men and six married women will be asked tomorrow to decide whether Laura Strimmar, middle-aged stenographer, lured Charles H. Cullinan, of Washington, D. C., into a bigamous marriage.

They were excused from Judge Brennan's courtroom this afternoon after the dark-eyed defendant in a $100,000 alienation of affections suit groaned and collapsed.

SHERIFF KILLS BOY IN RAID ON STILL

MARIANNA, Fla., May 12.—(AP) Deputy Sheriff Earl Spooner reported here he accidentally shot and killed James Montford, 14 years old, in a raid on a whisky still near Sneads today.

Spooner and Deputy Sheriff Dykes raided the still. They said the Montford boy and two others ran from it. In a chase that followed, Spooner said he stumbled and fell and his pistol accidentally discharged.

GEORGE'S MOTHER SEES CORONATION WITH DIM EYES

Queen Mother Wears Jewels Valued at More Than $2,000,000.

LONDON, May 12.—(P)—Queen Mother Mary, gray-haired but still regal at nearly 70, saw her second son crowned today while mists of memory dimmed her eyes.

Twenty-six years ago the crown of England's Queen was placed upon her head in the same Westminster Abbey. On January 28, 1936, she followed a draped coffin from Westminster Hall when the body of her husband, George V, made its last earthly journey.

Today she was a spectator. In her place, receiving the Queen's crown, was Queen Elizabeth. The first lady of the royal family, aside from the new sovereign, was little Princess Elizabeth, 11 years old.

But Mary bore herself with the dignity for which the British Empire knows her.

She stepped firmly down the Abbey aisle to her place in the royal box. From her head and throat blazed the great masses of jewels she loves. The gems she wore were estimated to be worth more than $2,000,000.

About her neck were five ropes of diamonds. In her hair was a great diamond-studded diadem, part of the crown she wore at her coronation in 1911. Her gown was covered with sparkling jewels.

The gown was of supple cloth of gold with a five-yard purple velvet robe fringed with ermine and embroidered in gold. A design of roses and fuchsias was embroidered on the gown in silver and diamante.

CRASHES ARE LAID TO MISJUDGMENT

Commerce Department Believes Pilots Made Errors During Flights.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—(P)—The Commerce Department reported today that misjudgment by pilots probably caused two fatal airline crashes near Newhall, California.

A United Air Line transport, wrecked on December 27, 1936, and a Western Air express, which crashed on January 12, resulted in the deaths of 17 persons.

The department said it was the opinion of its accident board that the dual crash probably was caused by "an error on the part of the pilot for attempting to fly through Newhall Pass at an altitude lower than the surrounding mountains without first determining by radio the existing weather."

In the instance of the second accident, the board reported the pilot of the plane descended to a "dangerously low altitude without positive knowledge of his position."

Your good will in the streets today, your countless messages from overseas and from every quarter of these islands have filled our hearts to overflowing. I will only say this, that in the coming years I can show my gratitude in service to you that is the way above all others that I should choose.

To many millions the crown is a symbol of unity by the grace of God and the will of the free peoples of the British Commonwealth. I have assumed that crown. In me as your King is vested for a time with the duty of maintaining its honor and integrity. This is still a grave and constant responsibility, but it gave me confidence to see your representatives along the Abbey and to know that you too were enabled to join in that infinitely beautiful ceremonial.

OUTWARD FORMS ARE OLD.

The outward forms come down from distant times, but its inner meaning and message are always new. For the highest of distinction is the service of others, and to the ministry of kingship I have, with your sharing, dedicated myself with the Queen at the outset of still have the solemnity. We will, God helping us, faithfully discharge our trust.

Those of you who are children now will, I hope, retain the memories of the day of carefree happiness such as I have had today of my grandfather's coronation. In the years yet to come some of you will travel from one part of the Commonwealth to another, and moving thus within the family circle will meet many whose thoughts are colored by the same memories, whose hearts unite in devotion to our common heritage. You will learn, I hope, how much our free association means to us. How much our friendship with each other and all other nations on the earth can help the cause of peace and progress.

The Queen and I will always keep in our hearts the inspiration of this day. May we ever be worthy of the good will which I am proud to think surrounds us at the outset of my reign. I thank you from my heart and may God bless you all.

Mussolini had all but boycotted the coronation because of Britain's refusal to recognize his conquest of Haile Selassie's empire. Makonnen and Grandi ignored each other.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., May 12. (UP)—Fingerprints tonight exploded the theory that a man found shot to death near the exclusive Surf Club at Miami Beach, Fla., was Edward J. Curran, formerly of Minneapolis.

Miami police tentatively had identified the body as that of Curran, former police character here and being sought on charges of receiving stolen property. Fingerprints sent here for verification of the identification failed to tally, however, police said.

COUNTESS OF OXFORD SEES RITE AS SYMBOL OF FREEDOM

DEEP SIGNIFICANCE OF COLOR, TRADITION ON SUBJECTS CITED

Words of Late Monarch on Empire's Peace Are Recalled.

The famous author of Margot Asquith's diary, long an intimate of members of the British royal family, describes here her impressions of the coronation of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth.

By THE COUNTESS OF OXFORD AND ASQUITH.

LONDON, May 12.—(By Cable) It is never easy to describe something which is a mixture of pagentry, symbolism, tradition, solemnity and religion, as was the coronation of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth.

For though, to the outward eye, the magnificence of colors, the coronets, the canopy, the jewels, the uniforms and the decorations—beautiful faces and famous men who came from every part of the empire—following the tradition of centuries of coronations of our former Kings and Queens—will ever remain memorable in the hearts and minds of those who were privileged to be in the King's coronation today, the ceremony has far deeper significance than any that has preceded it.

Cynics will say that all the great court ceremonies in this country are the same. That at Queen Victoria's coronation, the doors of Westminster Abbey were opened at 5 a. m., 11,000 tickets were distributed; in Hyde park there was a fair and 1,000 booths were erected, and it was estimated that the numbers of people in the streets who viewed the coronation were between four and five hundred thousand. That at the coronation of Edward VII there were fewer and at King George V's there were over a million and 12,000 policemen on duty and that there was just the same enthusiasm, loyalty and excitement then as today.

Cynics are wrong. The deeper significance of today's ceremony did not lie in the number, the loyalty or the enthusiasm. Times have changed unrecognizably since the last two coronations.

The empire over which King George VI reigns is further enlarged, freer to manage its own affairs, larger and more independent of central authority than it was in the days of Queen Victoria, King Edward or the much-loved father of our present King. And yet there never was a time in the history of this country when the people over whom our King reigns were more devoted to them, faithful in national observance, or more united.

And how has this been achieved? It is not from personal devotion, as the present King, though highly respected, is not familiar to the man in the street, nor has he been much in London society, nor, above all, unless a fine sense of duty and fundamental modesty make men that same, does he in any way resemble his father. I do not imagine that our King will embarrass his daughters in the manner George V did his sons. Whether from his early naval training or a mistaken notion that parents keep the affection of their children by putting them in their places I do not know, but George V's boisterous chaff undermined the confidence of his sons, more particularly his heir to the throne.

Love and Loyalty. No, it is not the resemblance of the King to his father or his personal popularity that I mean in referring to the significance of today's ceremony. It comes from what he represents to his subjects; he wins their love and their loyalty by his faith in freedom and his contempt for force. This is the deeper significance of today's ceremony in an age when emperors and kings have fallen and dictators govern two of the greatest countries in Europe.

I see no difference between Communists, Fascists and Nazis; they are all variations of the formidable egotism of man. "Where service is perfect freedom," to quote the beautiful collect which we repeat every Sunday, does not merely apply to Christianity; it applies to common sense. The sharers in our commonwealth will never be coerced. They do not

Coronation Twins Named for Rulers

CALGARY, Alta., May 12.—(Canadian Press)—"Coronation twins"—a boy and a girl—were born today to Mr. and Mrs. Chris Jensen, of Glendale, a Calgary suburb.

Naturally, they were named George and Elizabeth. George was born three minutes after midnight and Elizabeth 22 minutes later.

CORONATION NEWS IGNORED BY ITALY

One-Line Dispatch of London Pageant Carried by Duce's Press.

ROME, May 12.—(AP)—Official Italy, angered by English press lauds, over Italian defeats in the Spanish civil war, virtually ignored the coronation of King George VI today.

The only report of the London pageant provided for the controlled press was a one-line dispatch. "The coronation of King George of England took place this morning," was all it said.

There was an account, however, of disorders in Dublin. The newspapers related that police dispersed a crowd demonstrating against the "coronation of an English King for Ireland."

Radio stations had only the same reports as the newspapers.

Members of Rome's British colony who tried to listen to London broadcasts of the coronation complained reception was poor.

Local Britons attended a coronation service at the English church in Rome. Sir Eris Drummond, British ambassador to Rome; Francis Osborne, British ambassador to the Holy See; Albert Heymann, South African minister to Rome, and members of their staffs were present.

Americans Say Parade in London Just Like Circus

LONDON, May 12.—(AP)—The coronation, said one American in a London street, was just like a circus parade back home—except there were no elephants.

But there were cowboys—Canadian Mounties riding branded western ponies.

There were real Kings and Queens, Princes and Indian Rajahs for the American to see. And the royal carriage was covered with real gold leaf instead of circus gilt.

The everyday American either spent the night on the streets, or hurried early from ocean liners moored in the Thames, and from side-street hotels, to see the pageant of empire.

He discovered that British crowds don't push or shove for places, but cling silently for hours to a couple of feet of sidewalk space.

When the first contingent of turbaned Indians rode past, some Americans loosed a warwhoop; but by the time the King and Queen rolled by they had adopted the British technique of handkerchief-waving and polite cries of "horray."

BOY TRAPPED FOR HOUR BY HUGE STEEL BEAMS

GREENSBORO, N. C., May 12.—(AP)—Trapped by two huge steel beams at the end of a freight car on which he was riding, Lloyd Goodwin, 14, of Salisbury, Md., was removed from his trap, his body crushed by the pressure, after approximately 50 workmen struggled for more than an hour to remove the beams at Pomona freight yards here today.

Goodwin was riding at the end of a flat car loaded with large steel girders when the train made a sudden stop, which shifted the girders so that two of them trapped him. The extent of his injuries was undetermined tonight at a hospital.

ask for freedom as a favor; they claim it as a right, and any King who counters this legitimate prerogative would be deposed.

In the many fine speeches of King George V, there was one sentence which struck me as of greater grandeur than any other. In replying to addresses presented to him by his lords and commons in the Palace of Westminster on May 9, 1935, he said:

"In these days when fear and preparation for war are again astir in the world, let us be thankful that quiet government and peace prevail over so large a part of the earth's surface, and that under our flag of freedom so many millions eat their daily bread in far distant lands and climates with none to make them afraid."

When I listened to these noble words, I wondered if they would be reported in the German or Italian press.

I doubt if any dictator could have witnessed without envy not only what took place in Westminster Abbey but throughout the whole of the British empire today. The meanness of London's streets were decorated by citizens who could ill afford to pay for the flags, and as I sat waiting in Abbey, I thought of the patience, order and loyalty of rich and poor, young and old who had slept little and waited long to celebrate the crowning of their King.

Archbishop of Canterbury Places Crown Upon Head of King-Emperor

The symbol of temporal overlordship of the hundreds of millions in the British empire is bestowed upon the royal head of King George VI by the highest church dignitary of his realm, the Archbishop of Canterbury, primate of the Church of England. This radiograph was taken in the hallowed precincts of Westminster Abbey, where rest the bones of the mighty kings of England.

How King and Queen of Great Britain Rode to Their Coronation

The royal coach is shown as it appears with King George and Queen Elizabeth riding from Buckingham Palace to Westminster Abbey for their coronation. On every crown-bedecked bit of national bunting along the coronation route was emblazoned the Englishman's greatest tribute to his monarch—the historic phrase: "God Save the King." This picture was made on Ludgate Hill during a rehearsal.

from Bilbao, insurgent reports said.

(They trained guns on outlying Basque fortifications at Larrabezua, only five miles from the city. The insurgent command at Victoria, inland and to the south, declared government militiamen had quit the town of Amorebieta, eight miles east of Bilbao, falling back in the hope of making a stronger stand just outside the city.)

(Another insurgent report asserted 2,500 Basques were killed and wounded in a vain attempt to hold Biscargi Hill, north of Amorebieta, in one of the bloodiest struggles of the Bilbao offensive.)

With more than 300,000 food supplies again were running low as those recently brought in by British and French ships neared exhaustion.

HEAVY SLAUGHTER CLAIMED AT TOLEDO

TOLEDO, Spain, May 12.—(AP)—Heavy government attacks against historic, insurgent-held Toledo developed today into a mass offensive in which, insurgents said, the attackers suffered "unprecedented slaughter."

Government prisoners estimated their dead in the campaign at more than 3,000, with total casualties not calculated, insurgent reports said.

Coronation of Britain's Monarch Is Marked by Medieval Splendor

By KATHLEEN NORRIS.
(Copyright 1937, by The Constitution and the North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)

LONDON, May 12.—(By Wire)—There is silence again in Westminster Abbey as the later hours of a lingering spring afternoon slip by the thousands of feet that stirred today have gone their ways; the air that was rent by thousands of voices is still.

The banners of 10 centuries of wars, 10 centuries of knighthood, hang motionless in the opal twilight that the tall windows are gathering up, leaving the great space to its wonted shadows and memories. A few attendants are moving about, far down below the vaulted Gothic spires, picking up scattered programs and dropped flowers. But the great world has forgotten the Abbey again.

It is all over. There is a new King in the world, crowned and ordained in the hoary, weather-silvered medieval cathedral where so many of his ancestors had been crowned before him.

A rather tired, pale young King he seemed as he went seriously about his duty, crowned and ordained in the hoary, weather-silvered medieval cathedral where so many of his ancestors had been crowned before him. But when, at the very end, he came back from the chapel in his long, furred robe and his crown, he was not too tired to smile at his gracious, silver-haired mother when he passed the royal box or at the demure little girls in lacy pink who sat beside Queen Mary. It was a day of poignant emotion for many a man and woman who witnessed these historic and significant events, and perhaps for no one of them more so than for the King's beloved mother.

The center of the great floor space was cleared at 9 o'clock. Floored with a gold carpet and forming a cross, it had the high altar at its top. The empty royal box, the empty thrones, the empty famous chair of the great Edward I, with its dark Scotch stone, were all waiting. But the organ was playing, and before 10 o'clock, marshals, bishops and gentlemen-in-waiting were filtering in, and presently the amazing procession began.

Walking slowly between the rising banks of the brilliantly garbed peers, the vanguard alone was enough to blind the eyes and confuse the brain. So much magnificent color, so many magnificent figures dressed in the opal twilight of the past, carrying the crown, the regalia, their long capes spreading on the clear carpet, their small, aristocratic pages respectfully following one by one, filled in the blank spaces of the wonderful and brilliant picture. And the princes and the dukes came and the two little princesses stepping carefully and drawing their small violet velvet trains evenly behind them. The old Queen came, beautiful in blue and silver, and the happy young Queen, whose gown was gold and cream, the train heavily embroidered in gold on violet.

Then silence and a pause and then the King. And so the gathering excitement and the suspense, the culminating long-drawn thrill of this week of waiting is ended at last, and the organ trembles and the thousands of voices cry out hoarsely, "God Save King George."

And what was the thing I especially remember of today? It was little Princess Margaret Rose getting a trifle tired as the long ritual wheeled by and laying her small head on the front of the box. And Princess Elizabeth's righteous big-sister consternation over the baby's actions, and Queen Mary's smile and whatever it was she said that quieted the older child and left the dear little bright head resting until Margaret Rose was ready to join in again with all the rest of us in what was the forever memorable ceremony that crowned a king of England.

Did Premier Refer To Duke's Quitting?

LONDON, May 12.—(AP)—Listeners to the coronation broadcast address of Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin believed they heard pointed reference to the dynastic crisis of last December which led to the coronation today of George VI instead of his brother, Edward.

"In the Abbey," said the prime minister, "I saw our young King and his Queen dedicating their lives to the service of their people and, as I said only the other night in the house of commons, a service that can only be ended by death."

Edward, it was recalled, chose to end his service during his lifetime.

WEALTH OF EMPIRE IS PUT ON DISPLAY

Troubled Englishmen Forget Burdens and 'Go to Town.'

By MARY FENTRESS.
(Copyright 1937, by United Press.)

LONDON, May 12.—Englishmen high and low in this "tight little island" today shook off the burden of a quarter of a century of troubled times, hauled out family valuables that have not been exposed since days before the war and literally "went to town" for George the Sixth.

Within the tall, gloomy Abbey where George was crowned, there was spread the magnificence of an empire—$600,000,000 in jewels and ermine robes.

And above the head of the white-faced, solemn man they came to homage was the wealth of the empire in crown jewels, robes and costly raiment—worth more than $40,000,000.

But it was in the whole show that England did herself proud. For the folks at home and for visitors from across the sea, Britain exhibited, in a single day an unparalleled prodigality, the wealth, the might, the magnificence and the pride of the empire upon which the sun never sets.

From shabby East End to the Pall Mall they joined in a solid, almost spontaneous pageantry.

In the royal procession there were Americans in short pants, skinny, bare-legged little black men from British colonies in Africa, robed peers and peeresses of the realm, visiting rulers from India.

The scarlet of British army uniforms reminded you of Kipling's "Thin Red Line o' Heroes," and the gray, stern faces of men upon whom the responsibility of the empire rests loomed like a ghost of Britain's ancient past while the 72-year-old Archbishop intoned the coronation ritual.

It was far and away the "greatest show on earth." It lacked nothing—unless it was the sober, quiet man in a French chateau, who missed all of this because of the woman he loved.

U. S. HOUSE REVOLTS ON STATUS OF CCC

Clings to Two-Year Extension; Patronage Taint Hinted.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—(AP)—The senate became President Roosevelt's last recourse today for a permanent CCC when the house stubbornly clung to its position that the life of the $350,000,000 administration "pet" should be extended only two years.

The two-year extension was formally voted, 385 to 7. Shortly after the senate received the house bill, its own labor committee favorably reported a measure giving the CCC permanent status.

It, like the house measure, provided for a maximum enrollment of 315,000.

The house vote, confirming a standing vote of 224 to 34 taken yesterday, was the greatest show of independence in that chamber since the revolt in 1935 against the "death sentence" in the utility holding company bill. Privately, some legislators said the "revolt" was not actuated so much by a desire to economize as by the fact that members of congress are in better position to obtain camps and camp patronage with CCC in a temporary status.

Too Much Cream Leaves Pretender To Throne Sick

LONDON, May 12.—(AP)—The Tudor pretender to the throne of England, "King Anthony I," was slightly ill today but it was not from the coronation of his rival, King George VI.

The former Californian said he simply had too much rhubarb and cream.

"I've always been a sucker for rhubarb but not sucker enough to let all this coronation rot bother me," he declared.

"You just wait and see. I'll be sitting on that throne myself in 1940. England will be sick and tired of this German-blooded Albert Wettin by then." (Wettin was the family name of the House of Windsor before it was changed during the World War.) "The King," otherwise Anthony Hall, former policeman, claims he is a descendant of Ann Boleyn and Henry VIII's son whom history does not record.

HISTORY IS MADE AS QUEEN MOTHER SEES SON CROWNED

Monarch Described as Deeply Affected by Solemnity of Occasion.

By DR. JOCELYN PERKINS.
(Copyright, 1937, by United Press.)

LONDON, May 12.—Today, for the first time in England's long history, a Queen mother was present in the abbey when her son was anointed and crowned King and Emperor.

Every person in the abbey rose when the revered and beloved Queen Mary appeared, preceded by her sister-in-law, the Queen of Norway, and attended by her mistress of robes, the stately Duchess of Devonshire.

The Queen mother entered as the sound of St. Margaret's bells penetrated the abbey. This was the third coronation I have attended, having been present at the crowning of Edward VII and George V. Never have I seen a more impressive ceremony than that performed in the abbey today.

Big Ben boomed the hour of 11. State trumpeters simultaneously blew their mighty fanfares. The great procession from the annex to the choir looked mainly to the degree but with a set face and mien. He obviously was deeply affected by the solemnity of the occasion.

In whatever direction the eye turned it was met by a feast of color, notably in the north transept where the ermine capes of the peeresses seemed to suggest the waves of the sea.

Just at that moment, as if to suggest divine benediction, the rays of the sun penetrated the abbey windows. Now came the most important ceremony of the oath and here the Archbishop of Canterbury was responsible for an extraordinarily impressive gesture. As he uttered the words "Canada, New Zealand" and the names of the other dominions, he turned westward to the assembled multitude. Representatives of those dominions, whose names were mentioned for the first time in a coronation in Westminster Abbey, will not quickly forget this.

Then the king passed to the high steps of the altar and took the coronation oath.

GEORGIANS HONORED AT CLEMSON FETE

Federal Reserve Governor Hits AAA Decision at Building Dedication.

CLEMSON, S. C., May 12.—(AP)—Chester C. Davis, a member of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System, criticized as "astounding" and "ante-bellum" the supreme court's invalidation of the Agricultural Administration Act in an address at dedication exercises for Clemson College's $400,000 agricultural building here today.

"The questions considered in the AAA case have not been settled yet," said Davis, who was the original AAA administrator. "In the majority opinion the court abandoned the philosophy under which earlier problems had been met and which had made of our constitution a vital guide for a growing nation."

The building was dedicated to the memory of the late Dr. W. W. Long, extension director for South Carolina for 22 years.

In recognition of the occasion, the college abandoned its established policy of awarding few honorary degrees and conferred upon Davis and two score other agricultural leaders from all parts of the country the doctor of science degree.

Georgians honored at the exercises were Cully A. Cobb and H. L. Brown, of the United States Department of Agriculture; Paul W. Chapman, dean of the University of Georgia Agricultural school; H. P. Stuckey, director of the Georgia Experiment Station; Dr. W. D. Moore, of the United States Department of Agriculture; Tifton; J. A. Evans, of the University of Georgia.

Awarded scrolls of honor were the following Georgians: F. W. Atkinson, Augusta, Ga., and J. N. McBride, Savannah, Ga.

At the cadet parade, William B. Mosley, Savannah, was honored as the best-drilled guide.

month to the charities from the $20,000 per month already allocated by council to the Fulton Department of Public Welfare.

Funds for the purchase of new fire fighting equipment were left out of the new finance sheet because of dissatisfaction with the equipment on which the purchasing committee recently accepted bids.

The committee left out $14,500 for this equipment and specified that it was for the fire machines but that it must be allocated by special resolution of city council. Fire Chief O. J. Parker told the committee that the 1,500-gallon pumper on which the purchasing committee accepted a bid was an assembled pumper and that he recommended buying from a company which builds its own machinery. Mayor Hartsfield said Parker told him the Atlanta fire department could build two 1,000-gallon pumps for the $14,500.

Provisions Cited.
The new sheet includes the following amounts for these purposes: $163,000 to the schools as their 30 per cent share of the new revenue as required by law; $300,000 for retirement of the $1,700,000 deficit; $160,000 for the 10 per cent reserve in the water department for repairs and replacements; $20,000 for architect fees at the city auditorium; $4,800 for new police cars and motorcycles; $750 for the equipment of the police school; $4,219 for paint and traffic signs; $5,000 for the motor transport department supplies; $500 for telephones; $5,000 for Battle Hill sanitarium; $7,000 for police pension fund; $2,500 for improvements at city prison; $25,000 for purchase of new sanitary trucks and equipment; $23,136 for salaries of employees making less than $100 a month, and $67,174 for salaries of workers making more than $100 a month.

Where Money Originates.
The new revenue comes from a 30 per cent increase in water rates; from a unit-footage increase in sanitary fees, and from one mill ad valorem tax rate increase that was specifically earmarked by the legislature for the retirement of the deficit.

With the $163,000 recommended for allocation to the school yesterday and the $90,000 allocated to that department from the other mill tax increase which was allocated for relief, the school department will have a total of $253,000 additional for the year. The Board of Education is scheduled to make restorations of about 8 per cent to school workers who are under cuts ranging from 4 to 28 per cent at present.

W. Zode Smith, head of the water department, asked re-employment of a nightwatchman at the city water works reservoir and an extra clerk in the office but finance committee members refused.

"That would only start the parade back," Hartsfield said. Alderman Ed A. Gilliam, Councilmen John A. White, J. Allen Couch and Cecil W. Hester, other members of the committee, voted not to add new employees.

Hartsfield asked the committee to authorize a change in the telephone in the city warden's office. "At present, the city warden, who handles the city's relief, has an unlisted telephone in the office and persons wishing to call about relief can not reach the office," he said. "This is a ludicrous situation. The public should be able to get information over the telephone whenever they wish to."

White, Couch Sponsors.
Councilmen White and Couch sponsored the resolution to require the Fulton department of public welfare to aid private charities. The list and the amount to be given monthly under the resolution follow: Atlanta Child's Home, $200; Carrie Steele Logan Home, $50; Churches Home for Girls, $150; Florence Crittenden Home, $150; Child Welfare Association, $200; Hillside Cottages, $200; Home for Incurables, $200; Home for Old Women, $200; Sheltering Arms day nurseries, $200; Anti-Tuberculosis Association, $250; Good Samaritan clinic, $250; Family Welfare Society, $400; Red Cross, $150; Holmes Institute, $15; Georgia Association of Workers for the Blind, $25; and Community Home for Girls, $200.

Contributions to the Scottish Rite hospital, the Henrietta Egleston hospital and the Gate City Free Kindergarten would be eliminated under the resolution.
City Comptroller B. Graham West and Chairman Gilliam were instructed to find $2,528 to be appropriated for skilled labor at the city auditorium. The city has contributed all of its share of the cost of renovating the auditorium with the exception of this amount.

"It is unfair to make a statement that something has been done which might affect the judgment of this court."
Howard referred also to "other unseemly and improper expressions made here and in the newspapers regarding the purpose and motives behind this case in advance of the hearing—made generally to an interested public, but specially to judges who have the case under consideration."

Undecided on Appeal.
Howard said he had not decided whether to appeal this case to the supreme court or to rely on an appeal of the Franklin county case, which will be made by George Goode, senior counsel in the Franklin county case and associate counsel in the case here today.

Associated with Duckworth in defending the validity of the election were Dave M. Parker, assistant attorney general, and James V. Carmichael, Cobb county attorney, and member of the general assembly who steered passage of the election bill through the house of representatives.
A third suit seeking to prevent holding of the election will be heard at Douglas, in Coffee county, Saturday.

Lieutenant Dudley Forewood, the Duke's equerry.

The Duke never left the wireless throughout the long ceremony in London, but only once did he mention himself. He recalled his own excitement at the coronation of his father in 1911, and said he remembered every detail of it.

In the afternoon the sun broke through and the Duke and Rogers went out for two hours of golf. Tonight they gathered around the wireless set again to hear King George's empire broadcast. The King's voice will go to all the places where the Duke's went not so long ago when he took to the air to tell "at long last" why he was saying goodbye to family, throne and empire.

As a loyal subject of King George VI, the Duke sent congratulatory telegram to his brother, but the residents at Castle Cande declined to make its contents public.

'Festivals of Seasons' Forms Theme Of Annual Seminary May Day Fete

By Sally Forth.

AN ANNUAL affair always anticipated and noted for its colorful beauty is the May Day festival at Washington Seminary, scheduled for Tuesday and to which friends of the fashionable Peachtree road school are invited. This season the fete, according to advance information, promises to surpass all past celebrations in its interesting theme and its rich and varied costumes.

Of course the highlight of the occasion is the crowning of pretty blond Dorothy Bagwell as the Queen, a signal honor conferred upon a member of the senior class. She will make her entry following the entrance of the brilliant procession of the dancers, and members of the senior class, who will present a picturesque group gowned in their afternoon dresses in pastel shades and carrying sprays of spring flowers. Queen Dorothy will be attended by her maid of honor, Emily Mobley, and her court, which includes Margaret Palmer, Nancy Schwab, Margaret L'Engle, Elizabeth Colley, Helen Fuller, Susan Spratt, Betty Ann Bird, Georgia Adams, Patricia Poole and Sue Clapp.

The theme chosen is "Festivals of the Year," and the fete will be appropriately opened with a miniature wedding presented by the kindergarten children, the tiny attendants to be gowned in bridesmaids' dresses of pastel shades, and representing June, the month of brides. A military drill will represent the spirit of July Fourth, and a trio will depict the Spirit of '76, with Betsy Ross making the flag, and with George Washington and Miss Columbia taking leading roles.

September always means school days, and a group of children dressed in gingham frocks and sunbonnets and tap dancing on their slates will need no explanation that vacation days have passed. Puritans in their somber white and black garb will remind the audience assembled in the dell at the rear of the school of the first Thanksgiving. Santa Claus, resplendent in his ermine-trimmed suit, will usher in December. Old Saint Nick will enter on his sled drawn by his reindeer, and will be loaded down with his ever-mysterious bags. On this festival occasion dancing elves will open the toy bags, out of which will jump live dolls who will dance.

Mardi Gras time will represent the month of February and Spanish dancers in red and yellow costumes will dance, followed by Valentine dancers in white tartan dresses and climaxed by a group of students dancing the stately minuet as a portrayal of George Washington's birthday. Easter, a movable feast, will be featured as a March event, and tiny tots of the student body will represent Easter bunnies. There will be an Easter wagon topped by a large egg from which more little children, dressed as yellow chickens, will leap out and dance.

April Fool's Day will have its wonted merriment when the dolls, in lavender costumes, will give their dances. Bringing to a close the seasonal interpretations will be the May pole dancers dressed in dazzling costumes of gold and blue, the Seminary colors.

IT WAS one of those Kentucky Derby post-mortems which seem to have been in order since Saturday. A couple of prominent businessmen were discussing the merits of this horse and that.

The wife of one of the pair, who knows and cares little for horse racing, stood patiently by, paying little attention to the conversation. At last she vouchsafed a remark that she would certainly like to meet the army man who won all that money on the race. "What army man?" asked her husband.

"War Admiral," she replied.

EACH member of the Julius De Give family is in a different part of the country engaged in various activities. It seems, and only Mrs. De Give finds time to spend in Atlanta. She has opened her lovely Wieuca road residence after spending the winter in New York and Florida. Her brilliant young daughter, Mary L., is in New York engaged in medical research studies at Columbia University, where she plans to get a degree next year.

Mrs. De Give spent three months in Gotham last fall, and, as you know, she is an accomplished musician. She studied piano with Arthur Newstead, who is the husband of Katherine Baker, well-known concert pianist, and the couple often invited Mrs. De Give to lovely musicales in their home. The popular Atlanta also attended musical affairs given at the home of Clarence Adler, famed pianist.

During the Christmas holidays Mrs. De Give and Mary L. occupied their winter home at Cocoa, Fla., and then the latter returned to her work at Columbia. Bob, the younger De Give son, graduates in June from the Hun school in Princeton, N. J., and his mother will go up to attend the commencement exercises. The young graduate, his mother and sister will then return to Atlanta, where they will be joined by the older son, Julius, who now holds a position in Miami. Their summer home at Lakemont will be their next destination, where they will have a family reunion, so to speak.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By ELY CULBERTSON.
World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst.

Herewith is presented another portion of Mr. Culbertson's latest work on contract, the "Gold Book of Bidding and Play," which is being reproduced in this column in daily installments.

PENALTY PASS OF A SUIT BID.

When partner doubles a suit bid of one, a penalty pass should emphatically be avoided. Nothing but extraordinary trump strength justifies this pass. (A good rule is: Pass only when prepared for a lead in the opponent's trump suit. Usually the penalty pass calls for this lead.)

In counting up expected defensive winners against opponents' suit bid, the doubler's partner adds his trump tricks and honor tricks in side suits to three expected honor tricks in his partner's hand; no more. Unless the total is at least seven tricks, do not pass.

Opponents' contract of one heart, doubled for a take-out by partner, may be left in with spade 8, heart Q J 7 6 3, diamond A 6, club J 9 7 4, particularly when opponent is vulnerable. A two-trick penalty may be anticipated. If the opponents are not vulnerable the pass still is proper, but only because the game is uncertain and a two-trick set reasonably sure.

MY DAY

By Eleanor Roosevelt

NEW YORK CITY, Tuesday.—I reached New York city yesterday afternoon and visited two of my family who are temporarily laid up. My mother-in-law says that everyone now knows that she broke two of the bones in her ankle and therefore has her foot in a plaster cast and cannot be a good thing, for she is usually active. She kept it absolutely secret for a whole week until she was sure her letters explaining the injury was slight would reach both my husband and myself.

I doubt very much if he received her letter until after my telegram reached him saying I had seen her and she seemed extremely well and would probably profit by the rest. It is fortunate that letters don't reach their destination at sea quite as quickly as they might on land. She looks perfectly well and is accepting this mishap with her usual philosophy, her only remark being that she would prefer to be in the country and that perhaps, if she had kept to her plan and gone to Seattle, she would not have occurred. She had planned to go out to visit her granddaughter and her family.

A quiet evening with a friend and much work. This morning I finally had a chance to try on some clothes which I ordered six weeks ago! I meant to have a spring suit to wear when I went west. Something turned up and I never had a chance to try it on. I discovered an old one did quite as well. It is probably a good thing for the new suit ought to last me an extra season as its usefulness this spring will be rather short.

The exhibition of schoolwork at the Todhunter school takes place this afternoon and then I am going to see the exhibit which the New York World's Fair committee has on the first floor of the Empire State building. I am much interested in this fair as well as the proposed one in San Francisco. It seems to me that there is opportunity here to do remarkable piece of work from the educational standpoint. The conception of the whole fair as outlined to me sounds very provocative of thought.

There are drawbacks in being so easily recognized. As I hurried along yesterday afternoon, someone stopped me and said: "I will never have another chance to talk to you and I have been waiting for a long time to get your consideration of my case. I want a civil service rating and a good job, but I can't get it unless I can have one of those presidential appointments."

I had to explain at some length that the President had no private appointments in the civil service; that he could invite people to serve in his cabinet subject to the ratification of congress and he could appoint people to various other important offices, also subject to congress' approval.

He has the privilege of appointing the sons of officers in the army and navy to Annapolis and West Point, but when it comes to civil service, everybody has to take an examination and only the Civil Service Commission can pass them. I thought I made a very clear explanation, but the face which was turned upon me bore an expression which plainly said: "You are just trying to get out of helping me. I know if you wanted to do this for me, you could do it."

Hollywood Today

By SHEILAH GRAHAM.

HOLLYWOOD, May 12.—Osa

Johnson, widow of Explorer Martin Johnson, killed in the plane crash in which she was seriously injured, has been signed by Darryl Zanuck to head an expedition to Africa to film "Stanley and Livingstone."

The movie is based on Reporter Stanley's autobiography, "How I Found Livingstone," and "The Life Story of Livingstone" by Harold Long, and will describe in detail the exact route and dramatic rescue of the explorer after he had been given up as dead by the world. Permission for the making of the film and a promise of cooperation has been obtained from the British and Belgian governments by Twentieth Century-Fox.

Mrs. Johnson, with Director Otto Brower, a crew of 10 cameramen, five technicians and the important members of the cast leave for Africa in November and they are expected to remain three months. The production has a budget of $1,500,000, and is the most ambitious film yet conceived in the agile mind of Mr. Zanuck.

The first of Miriam Hopkins' two-picture deal with R. K. O. Radio is "Female of the Species," a romantic comedy describing the adventures of a small-town girl who goes to New York to seek a career. Miriam, incidentally, has bowed out of "The Perfect Specimen," in favor of Joan Blondell, and instead will appear with Kay Francis as two of three sisters in the Warner movie, "The Sisters."

As a reward for his work in "Firefly," (Jeanette MacDonald-Alan Jones starrer), Leonard Penn, husband of Gladys George, has been signed to a long-term contract by M-G-M. His first picture on his new ticket is the featured role of Doctor Woolcott in "General Hospital," with Franchot Tone and Virginia Bruce.

Katharine Hepburn returned to Hollywood yesterday and starts work immediately in "Stage Door," in which Burgess Meredith was scheduled to be her leading man. The actor has been detained in New York due to a "run-of-the-play" contract for "High Tor," but R. K. O. Radio is hoping to replace him with Robert Montgomery.

Ginger Rogers also plays an important role in the production. News in brief. . . The sequel mania continues. Universal carries on the singing career of Deanna Durbin in "Three Smart Girls Go To Town," as a chaser for "Three Smart Girls," in which Deanna went to town. . . Sylvia Sydney joins Joan Bennett, Henry Fonda, Madeleine Carroll and any other Walter Wanger stars who happen to be on the loose for "Arabian Nights," his mammoth technicolor production for 1937.

London is paying George Raft for the leading role in an Elizabeth Allan picture for Herbert Wilcox. This may be Raft's long-awaited opportunity of teaching the rhumba to King George VI, a follow-up to the dancing lessons he gave the Duke of Windsor when he was still Prince of Wales.

INSTALLMENT XX.

"Very pretty," Esther said. "What is it?"

"Just a little thing I picked up for my wife."

"Oh, Norman, you shouldn't have," she said with stimulated modesty, lowering her eyes. "Well, now that you've shown me the sights, may we go home?"

"It's really all yours, Esther. A room for every mood. Tonight you may have any one except the blue room."

The next morning they were on the terrace overlooking a wide garden. Esther was still dazzled by what the magazines were later to refer to as their "palatial estate."

"I just can't seem to believe it, Norman. Would you mind telling me again, very slowly?"

He beamed, speaking every word with great distinctiveness. "That's—your new house. That is—your new house. And here's your new husband." He gave her an affectionate hug. "But come on. The garden's been waiting long enough for you."

"Like it?" he asked.

"It's the most wonderful surprise anybody ever had. And there was thinking we were going to live at the beach house."

"Oh, we'll still keep the house at the beach. But this is special. This is our castle that used to be in the air. Here we'll never use ugly words like 'contracts' and 'pictures' and 'careers.' When we come in these gates, we'll check the studio outside."

He stopped and put his arm around her.

"Hey, hold that!"

They spun around to see Libby, wreathed in smiles, spying on them from the summer house. Otto Fried was standing next to Libby, his camera set up.

"That's it," said Libby. "Caption that 'Their Honeymoon Never Ends.'"

Norman pretended to be seeing something distasteful. "Well, this is a surprise," he said, "and a very unpleasant one."

"Just dropped over to welcome you home. All is forgiven. How are you, Mrs. Maine?"

Esther greeted Libby and the photographer.

"Nice little home you got here," said Otto. "Very tasty."

"Otto, if you didn't like it, we'd sell it," Norman said solemnly.

The press agent was all business again. "All right. Let's get some pictures. Now if the bride will just sit here, and the groom stand behind her, we'll have something unique."

They complied and Libby demanded a pose with the positions reversed.

"Pretty radical, isn't it?" Norman remarked sarcastically.

"Yeah, but in a nice way," Libby retorted. "All right, Otto, fire! Captain that 'Their Honeymoon Begins Anew.' Maybe we better change that to 'Their Honeymoon Ceases Abruptly.' Here comes the producer."

Oliver Niles was slowly crossing the lawn. There was an abstracted look on his face, but he roused himself when he approached the group and received Esther's warm greeting.

"Am I interrupting anything?" Niles asked.

"Yes, and thanks," Norman responded. "I think that'll be enough pictures."

"But we need some more," Otto protested. "They're asking for exclusives of Miss Lester alone, and we haven't taken any of those."

"I see," Norman said, hiding the wound to his vanity. "Come on, Oliver, let's you and I get exclusive."

As Norman passed him, the photographer instinctively put up his hand to protect his camera.

Norman laughed. "Don't worry, Otto," he said. "My camera smashing days are over."

Under his breath the photographer muttered: "And those ain't your only days that are over, either."

The producer was strangely silent as he walked beside Norman. He would need all the resources of his tact to suggest to Norman the things that were in his mind. Of course, he had warned Norman often in the past, but the actor was too self-confident to have any suspicion that the day of doom was near.

Norman broke the silence. "Well, Oliver, how's the dividend situation?"

"Very pleasant," Niles lit a cigarette. "I think we'll show two million at the next quarter."

Norman groaned. "That was a smart move of mine to sell my stock," he said in self-reproach. "Well, when you need money, you need it."

"Some people save a little just for that event," Niles said dryly. "There's bound to be a rainy day occasionally."

Norman was still the jester. "As a citizen of California I've always refused to admit that."

"Yes, I know. But still it does rain." Come to the point, he kept urging himself. But it was a struggle. Norman made it so difficult with his lighthearted treatment of serious matters. And there was Esther to consider. He hoped she wouldn't be too broken up by changes in the studio that he had taken place during her absence.

"Well, anyway you can thank me for some of those dividends of yours," Norman was saying. "Can't you?"

"Oh, sure. Sure." It was too hasty. Norman caught the intonation.

"That was a little too quick," he said, shrewdly surmising it to be a cover-up for some hidden thought. "Our last picture was a smash hit, wasn't it?"

"It made Vicki a star over night," Niles parried, evading the question.

"Yes and it should have," Norman responded warmly. "And what about me?" he asked in a changed tone.

Niles considered the tip of his cigarette, not being able to look at Norman. He was becoming uncomfortably aware that they were treading on dangerous ground.

"Let's wait and talk about business at the office, Norman." He rose slowly, changing the subject. "Beautiful garden you have here."

"No, let's talk about it here," Norman said belligerently. "Didn't they like me?"

"Well, maybe the part wasn't just it."

"It was the best part of the year," Norman said quietly, almost to himself. "Look here, Oliver, do you think I'm slipping?"

"Can you take it?"

"Go ahead."

"The tense is wrong, Norman. You're not slipping. You've slipped."

Norman was slowly grasping the seriousness of the situation. The bluntness of the producer's statement caused him to seek an argument that he could use in rebuttal.

"My fan mail's still big," he said dully.

This was an exaggeration, although Norman, to do him justice, was not aware of it. But Niles was being patient.

"Norman, Norman!" he said. "Fans'll write anybody for a photo."

graph. It only costs three cents for the stamp. That makes photographs cheaper than wall paper. But every quarter they pay for a theater ticket buys them the right to be a critic. And your last few performances. Norman, haven't pleased your critics."

"Remember, I told you I'd be ready for the curtains when the time came. Well, here it is. Let's call off the contract and no hard feelings."

Norman spoke without conviction. He was shocked to the core by the revelation of the sudden loss of a popularity which had seemed enduring. True, he had promised to quit when he was no longer in demand; and it had not been a rash promise. He had been convinced that the tapering off of his fame would arrive at some distant time when he himself would be ready to welcome a less active life. But now, at the beginning of his happiness with Esther, he was definitely not ready for such a tame existence. Niles seemed to read his thoughts.

"We're not quitting yet," he said. "Either of us. There's no explaining these things. We've all seen how quick the public turns. Maybe we can turn it back. I've got a swell script lined up for you."

About Esther—Norman hesitated. "If you think I'm going to get in her way—"

"Well, as a matter of fact," Niles said with forced enthusiasm, "there isn't anything for her in this story. I'd more or less planned to star her in a picture of her own. Maybe with that—" young Pemberton—opposite her. He'd come along very nicely.

"Good for young Pemberton," Norman said a little grimly. "All right, Oliver. We'll make a try at it. And let's hope it's not too late."

Niles grasped the arm of his erstwhile leading star. "Let's hope so," he said slowly, attempting to disguise his feeling that this beautiful feeling was to house only one star whose light would shine with undiminished brilliance.

For the sake of Esther, Niles told himself as they went to rejoin the others, he would do everything in his power for Norman. It would be tough sledding. Already it had been necessary to bill Vicki Lester over Norman Maine in "The Enchanted Hour." In addition, exhibitors were beginning to turn up their noses at advance announcements of Maine's starring vehicles. "He's finished," they complained. "He keeps them away in droves."

Norman, on his side, felt that he had been hounded into a dissolute life. But he would not indulge in self pity. He must hang on at all costs now, to spare the humiliation of watching his ruin. She must be sheltered from learning the truth until he could repair whatever damages had already been done to his name.

When they came upon her, Esther was immersed in a deep reverie, and she looked so spiritually contented that the men stood watching her in silent adoration, neither wishing to break the spell.

STANLEY'S ADVENTURES IN AFRICA.

IX—Emin Pasha.

In the heart of Africa, Stanley's path crossed that of another famous white leader, a man who was known as Emin Pasha.

The life of Emin Pasha is a strange and adventurous story. He was a German of Jewish descent, and during his boyhood and youth was known as Edward his hands a letter from the khedive of Egypt.

Late in the month of April, 1888, Stanley was in camp beside Lake Albert when a boat came in view—a little steamboat. Among those on board was Emin Pasha.

The steamboat cast anchor, and Emin came ashore. Speaking of the event, Stanley later wrote:

"I expected to see a tall, thin, military-looking figure, but instead I saw a small, spare figure in a well-kept fez, a clean suit of snowy cotton cloth. A dark, grizzled beard bordered a face of Magyar cast, though a pair of spectacles lent it somewhat an Italian or Spanish appearance."

Stanley delivered the letter from the khedive of Egypt. Emin Pasha read it with care, but he did not like its contents. The letter made it clear that Egypt would no longer try to keep power over that part of Sudan. It was suggested that Emin Pasha come to Cairo.

Emin talked over the matter with Stanley, and at last agreed to leave central Africa. Telling of the character of Emin Pasha, Stanley set down these words, "He was just, tender, loyal and merciful, and affectionate to the natives who placed themselves under his care."

They got Eddie Rose up from a bridge game of the hotel lobby in Little Rock.

I was curious as to why the outfielder, obtained in barter from New Orleans, was banging the baseball for an average of .500 in his first five games with the Crackers when usually he does not start hitting until late.

"Gee," he said, "I guess it's just a change of scenery. I like being with the Crackers. It's great. A change of scenery usually helps a player. And I'm very pleased to be playing for Eddie Moore and Atlanta.

"You're right. I don't usually start hitting until late. I don't know. I just started hitting when I joined the Crackers. I hope I can keep it up."

Eddie Rose, for whom Joe Hutcheson was bartered, largely is responsible for the club's perking up in the Little Rock series.

Joe Hutcheson was trying too hard in Atlanta. He knew much was expected of him. The big boy had a positive genius for coming up in the pinches when the bases were occupied and two out. His outs all had exclamation points after them. Perhaps the change will be good for Big Joe. A lot of fans will be wanting it so.

Meanwhile the Crackers are going along "Mighty Like a Rose."

He was hitting .183 in 16 games with New Orleans. In five with our nine he is hitting .400.

PUNISHING THE BASEBALL

Those Crackers are punishing the baseball rather smartly. It's the best spring hitting club in some time, with six men batting better than .300 and Rose having a mark above that figure in his games with Atlanta.

Just for a look, the Crackers are hitting—

Rose	5 games	.400
Luby	24 games	.365
Richards	22 games	.360
Mailho	24 games	.354
Galvin	19 games	.353
Hooks	14 games	.346
Mauldin	24 games	.303
Chatham	24 games	.275
Hill	20 games	.273
Moore	11 games	.160

As soon as the pitching staff gets settled down to its job, that hitting will pay better dividends. Memphis continues to have the best balance between pitching and hitting. The pitching there has been the most effective.

Our nine doesn't yet look like the pennant winner. But there is many a slip betwixt now and September. And it would be very fortunate indeed to have the Crackers get through with all their bad luck now.

OUT OF THE MOUTHS OF BABES.

A red-headed kid of about four finished up with a haircut in a barber shop yesterday afternoon. He spied the shoeshine stand.

"Hey, Dad," he said, "I want to get a shine."

"Go ahead," said his father.

He watched the shine boy apply the polish. His brow was thoughtful. At last he said, solemnly: "A shine is dessert for shoes."

FROM ARGOS, GREECE.

From Argos, Greece, comes a packet of picture cards from little Nick Matrangos, the great little Greek who at 72 years of age went back to his native land for the first visit in about 40 years. He writes:

"I arrived in my old home well. I had a good voyage. I went and saw Marathon where I raced 41 years ago. I saw the old home where I was born. Now I am feeling fine. I will stay here six or seven months and then come back to America. And will see you. Your friend, NICK MATRANGOS."

He told the whole story in those few lines. He wanted to go back and see his people, the home where he was born, and Marathon, where he ran in the first marathon race in the revival of the Olympics. While there Nick Matrangos expects to consume enough Retsina to give him 72 more years of life.

STEALING CENTER FIELD.

There were some very unusual events at The Constitution's party at Lakewood park Tuesday evening. One of the best occurred in a softball game in which the stars of the advertising department and circulation department played to a stirring 3-and-3 tie.

Dave Hoskins, of the ad team, stole center field. Probably this is the first time in baseball history a man ever stole center field.

Mr. Hoskins singled. He had left his glasses on the bench.

HOT PACE FEAR REDUCES FIELD FOR PREAKNESS

War Admiral, Pompoon, Matey Top Select Field of Nine.

By PAUL SIMMONS.

BALTIMORE, May 12.—(AP)—A promise that the pace in the mile and three-sixteenths Preakness will be a blistering one has reduced the probable field for the historic $50,000-added stakes to be run Saturday at Pimlico to a select group of nine.

Not many owners feel their racers have the speed to run with Samuel D. Riddle's lightning-like Man o' War colt, War Admiral, the Derby winner, and if the track remains fast, the number of starters may be even less than nine.

Should rain fall and make the going slower, the field probably will be larger since the Riddle speedster has never proved he likes the mud and the chance of defeating him might be greater on a gummy track.

Trainer Danny Clarke announced Wayne Wright would ride Pompoon, J. H. Louchheim's long-striding colt, which finished second in the Derby. Clark said he believed that if Pompoon had been gotten away faster and taken to the front earlier, he would have fared better at Churchill Downs.

Accordingly, he announced, the bay son of Pompey will be rushed from the gate Saturday in an effort to tire down War Admiral in the early stages and beat him to the finish.

Some felt that if these two speedsters locked horns in this manner they might run themselves out and leave the way open for another to win. Walter M. Jefford's Matey, a Man o' War colt, for instance, is an exceptionally strong finisher and should find such a situation to his liking.

Fast and Daring Sport Is Roller-Rink Hockey

Newest Atlanta Game Makes Flashy Debut at Lakewood; Rivals Ice Hockey.

By RALPH MCGILL.

Murder at the skating rink—Or roller-rink hockey, is the latest game to come to our town. And once you put your eyes on it, you'll be back again.

The boys played the first game Tuesday night at the Lakewood rink. It's not quite as fast as ice hockey but the speed is so great you'll never guess it. And it is, very definitely, as exciting and as mercurial in appearance as the game on ice.

The boys playing the first game are all local boys who skate well, with speed and with considerable courage. The latter is a requisite when one goes after the puck and several other skaters have the same idea at the same time.

LIKE CAGE UNIFORMS. They play with most of the pelt bare. The uniforms are exactly like basketball uniforms except the boys cover the legs from feet to knees, with stockings. The goalies wear heavy shin guards similar to those worn by goalies in ice hockey.

Ice hockey is about 50 years old. It was originated at McGill University in Canada in 1897. The rules were derived from the game of field hockey, which is an ancient game, probably 2,500 years old. Roller-rink hockey is relatively new. It has replaced ice hockey in at least two cities which had franchises in an ice hockey league and were not doing any too well.

POPULARITY SEEN. They get up a tremendous amount of speed and the team members can skate with rare skill. They make a brand-new game for Atlanta. And unless I miss my guess the game is going to draw well. The rink at Lakewood should be packed.

Plans are afoot to bring a team from Birmingham over for some inter-city competition. Meanwhile, the local brand is plenty exciting. It is easily the best indoor sport to be developed for southern climes.

The boys really have at it with an entire disregard for life and limb.

B. & C. Defeats Teeny Weeny, 6-4.

B. & S. rink team defeated Teeny Weeny, 6 to 4, in a fast roller rink game at Lakewood last night. Carlson starred for the winners with three scores. Abbey was next with two. Johnson scored two points for Teeny Weeny.

Lash Won't Compete In Memphis Carnival

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., May 12.—(UP)—Don Lash, Indiana University track star, said tonight he will not compete in the Cotton Carnival track meet at Memphis Friday. Physicians said he had completely recovered from a slight appendicitis attack suffered Tuesday night, but advised him to rest so as not to injure his chances in the Big Ten meet at Ann Arbor, Mich., next week.

Lash had planned to run in the 3,000-meter race Friday.

VET AL WATROUS BACKED HEAVILY

Jack Doyle Forced To Make Veteran 10-to-1 Choice in Open.

By PAUL MICKELSON.

NEW YORK, May 12.—(AP)—A firm believer in the old saw that "money talks," Broadway Jack Doyle opened his big future book on the 1937 National open golf championship today with a veteran longshot listed among his six leading favorites.

So much money and so many inquiries have poured in on Al Watrous, pro at the championship layout at Oakland Hills, Detroit, that the cagey betting commissioner placed the 38-year-old vet in the top bracket at 10 to 1 with such outstanding title threats as Harry Cooper, Henry Picard, Ralph Guldahl, Johnny Revolta and Horton Smith.

In arranging his silver anniversary book on the open, Doyle stuck most of the hot shots in the second flight at 15 to 1. They are Byron Nelson, Paul Runyan, Ray Mangrum, Lawson Little, Gene Sarazen, Walter Hagen, Tony Manero, Denny Shute, Vic Ghezzi, Jimmy Thomson, MacDonald, Smith, Wiffy Cox, Ky Laffoon, Sam Snead, Hal McSpaden, Felix Serafin, Dick Metz, Walter Hagen, Frank Walsh, Jimmy Hines, Thom Armour, Mortie Dutra, Bill Burke and Ed Dudley.

You can get them at 15-6-3 and 3 to 2 across the board, counting four places. All others are 20 to 1 and upwards. Odds, explained Doyle, would be shifted according to play as in the case of Watrous. "And it's play or no pay," explained Doyle. "If a player is bet at these odds and doesn't play, it's tough luck for the bettor."

"Bob Jones, Gene Sarazen and Walter Hagen," he sighed, "led me a dog's life for years because they always had plenty of money on their noses."

CHICK ALDRIDGE, TOWNS, PACKARD, GREEN MENACES

However, Team Title Is Main Goal in Meet at Birmingham.

By JACK TROY.

Tech and Georgia trackmen may write a few new records into the book in the annual Southeastern conference meet at Birmingham this week end.

While it is team performance rather than individual record-smashing both schools mainly are interested in, there are athletes on both squads considered capable of lowering existing marks.

Particularly is this true of Tech's fine two-mile champion, Chick Aldridge; Georgia's world champion high hurdler, Spec Towns, and his discus-throwing teammate, Maurice Green. Towns will also compete in the high jump and the 100-yard dash.

Towns already holds the conference record for the high hurdles with a mark of 14.1. He's considered a sure winner in the event and is not expected to be pressed. But should Towns turn on the steam, he might better that record, although he never has, in this country, done better than 14.1.

THAT OSLO FEAT.

However, once last year in Oslo, Norway, Towns was accredited with the astonishing mark of 13.7. Aldridge, who will run only the two-mile, turned in a performance of 9 minutes, 38 seconds in running fourth in the Sugar Bowl meet. The conference record is 9 minutes, 51.5. Don Lash and the Rideout twins, of Texas, were in that race.

With the weight of the mile lifted, Aldridge can turn all his attention to the two miles and may, conceivably, run it in record time. He is, as said, the conference champion.

In practice, Green consistently has bettered the conference record in the discus throw. Green has been tossing the platter around 150 feet. The record is 149 feet, 1-2 inches.

These are the outstanding hopes of Tech and Georgia for record-breaking performances but, as mentioned, it's team performance rather than individual mark-making that interests both teams.

HIGHLY RATED.

Georgia is being rated a co-favorite with L. S. U. to win the meet. They are saying, in some quarters, that the Bulldogs will nose out the Tigers.

Tech, lacking outstanding sprinters, hurdlers and field performers, looks for first place mainly from Aldridge and Charley Belcher, sophomore quarter-mile star.

Georgia's chief hope lies in the ability of Bulldog performers to get enough second and third places. They are virtually assured enough firsts beforehand. The meet is to be held Friday and Saturday in Birmingham, and athletes of both schools depart today.

Georgia's squad includes Towns and Bobby Packard, Olympic stars; Jack Robinson, Harry Stevens, Joe Gillespie, Maurice Green, Harry Harman, Monk Arnold, Quinton, Edw. Roundtree and Bob Wilcox, Buster Mathews and Shorly Rankin. Wilcox, Harman and Towns are defending champions in their specialties, namely, the broad jump, high jump and the high and low hurdles.

TECH'S SQUAD.

Those making the trip for Tech include Tom Jones, 100 and 220 dashes; Dutch Konemann, 100-yard dash and javelin; Charles

Baptist Session in New Orleans Recalls Historic Augusta MeetingSouthern Convention Was Outgrowth of Dissension in General Body Over Views on Slavery; Organization Effected 92 Years Ago.

By ADA RAMP WALDEN.

AUGUSTA, Ga., May 12.—United in spirit and aim with the body from which it separated, but independent of action since 1845, the Southern Baptist Convention will assemble in New Orleans tomorrow for the third session in its history in the Louisiana city.The session vividly recalls the founding of the Southern Baptist Convention during the pre-war dissension over the question of slavery. Establishment of the southern body occurred in Augusta, 92 years ago.In 1845, some Baptists in Boston withdrew from the triennial convention and formed a Free Mission Society, declaring their opposition to affiliation with those holding opposite views on slavery.

Neutral Stand Taken.

The triennial convention approved a resolution which said:
"That in co-operating together as members of this convention in the work of foreign missions, we disclaim all sanction, either expressed or implied, whether of slavery or anti-slavery; but as individuals we are free to express our views."PARIS POLICE DISCLOSE
NEW TERRORIST PLOTPARIS, May 12.—(AP)—Police tionale disclosed the arrest over the week end of Stephen Marusic, whom they described as one of the leaders of the Balkan group which the assassination of King Alexander, of Yugoslavia, in 1934 was attributed.He was seized on a false passport charge, and a search of his hotel room revealed "interesting documents," the agents said.CHICAGO SISTER DIES

URGED BY ROOSEVELTWASHINGTON, May 12.—(UP)— President Roosevelt today, in a special message to congress, directed attention to the need for a general program of soil conservation, flood control and water conservation.Mr. Roosevelt spoke only in general terms and didn't reveal what projects, if any, should survive the rising tide of congressional economy. That responsibility he left to congress.The President's message, which accompanied a booklet, "Headwaters Control and Use," puts him on record as favoring a comprehensive program to combat erosion, floods and drought but does not place him in opposition to efforts to cut government expenses.We Sell and Repair—

TO 31 BURGLARIESLoot Piles Up at Headquarters as Much of It Remains Unclaimed.The stolen property room at police headquarters resembled a miniature metropolitan department store last night, thanks mainly to a negro listed as Samuel Golden, 30, according to police.Detectives Paul E. Jones and J.
T. Mitchell said Samuel had confessed to 31 burglaries since he was captured May 1 while attempting to enter the home of
J. B. Levens at 812
Adams avenue.Among other things, the stolen property room contained two domond rings, valued at approximately $1,000; a Hudson seal coat, estimated to have cost $500; seven suitcases and handbags; 47 ladies' dresses; three pistols; a large assortment of ladies' underwear;
three men's overcoats; six suits;
rugs, draperies, bed clothing, eyeglasses, two watches."I don't know how many places
I've been in, but I think about 25," Samuel told officers when arrested. To date, said the detectives, Samuel's memory has been constantly improving and he has already recalled 31 homes; and is still recollecting.Much of the recovered property remains unclaimed, and the detectives invited recent burglary victims to inspect the "store."U. S. LOAN GROUP CURB URGED IN BANK PARLEYNASHVILLE, Tenn., May 12.— (AP)—The Tennessee Bankers' Association, its members were told today, should unite in a movement to curtail the operation of government loaning agencies.A. G. Brown, president of the Ole Miss Bankers' Association, at Toledo, said such a movement was necessary for "protection of those credit fields which should be reserved to the banking institutions."Brown added that a public opin-question of independent banking occupies "an essential place in the credit structure and that its place cannot be so well served by any agency other than our private
